SUMMARY.

The Germans on Wednesday made an attack between the Aisne and the forest of Villers Cotterets. Desperate fighting is proceeding.

The French are everywhere fighting fiercely, and with stubborn bravery.

The fighting on the front from Dommiers and Cutry to the south of Ambleny is very bitter.

All the enemy's attempts to counter attack on the French left, between Montdidier and the Oise, were shattered.

The French made further progress east of Mery and Senlis Wood.

On the French right the Germans, despite repeated efforts, were unable to debouch.

On the south bank of the Matz the French hold the southern part of Chevincourt.

A French communique issued late on Wednesday night stated that the enemy renewed pressure between Montdidier and the Oise.

"All his attempts to recapture our Tuesday's gains failed. We made progress in the region of Belloy Wood and St. Maur.

"We took 400 more prisoners, several guns, and numerous machine guns."

"The Germans on our right renewed their attacks at the Matz River.

"After several costly attempts they gained a footing on the southern bank."

The French east of the Oise withdrew from Bailly and Tracy le Val to west of Nampcel.

The French repulsed an enemy attack in the region of Hautebraye and took prisoners.

The French counter attack on Tuesday forestalled a powerful enemy attack that was being prepared.

The most serious aspect of Hutier's attack is to gain territory west of the Oise, from which the French had to retire.

The withdrawal created a deep French salient on the left bank of the Oise, from Ribecourt to Sempigny.

Hutier's plan included the capture of Compiegne by Sunday evening. He has still six miles to go.

Critics agree that if Foch throws in his reserves Ludendorff will launch an attack in the direction of the Channel ports.

The fact that Hutier is putting in fresh shock divisions shows the German determination to carry through.

It is estimated that 100,000 fresh enemy troops have been thrown into the battle.

Mr. Grasty says the enemy is determined, at whatever cost, to hasten the climax of the battle.

Paris believes that General Foch will be able to hold his line for four months, when there will be 1,250,000 Americans in France.

Sir Douglas Haig reports that there is nothing special on the British front.

The French carried out a successful raid in the neighbourhood of Locre.

A German official report states:—"We repulsed with the heaviest losses a French counter attack south-westward of Noyon."

"We threw back the enemy on the whole front from Le Ploiron to Antheuil. The prisoners now number 15,000."

"The enemy evacuated Carlepont Wood. We are pursuing him."

The newspapers draw attention to the fact that the Germans are no longer reporting their air losses.

This is said to be the result of the Allies' superiority. One British squadron brought down 105 enemy machines in six weeks.

Advices from Switzerland state that the German Admiralty is considering a great naval offensive.

It is believed orders have been given to place the German Fleet in readiness for action.

The Slavic agitation in Austria is growing alarmingly. The Government is suppressing the rising with all its force.

Petrograd is reported to be in a state of turmoil. The population is dying of hunger, while smallpox and typhus are raging.

Fierce fighting is in progress in Siberia and European Russia between the Czecho-Slovaks and the Bolsheviks.

Brigadier-General Antill, at the Millions Club luncheon, made some strong remarks regarding the apathy of eligibles.

"Why won't they go?" he asked. "They say it will be time enough when the enemy is at our gates.

"Australia will never be defended here. If the time comes for us to fight here within our own gates we are done," he said.

The returned soldiers—330 New South Wales men and 160 Queenslanders—were accorded an enthusiastic welcome yesterday.

Splendid tributes were paid to France at the farewell luncheon tendered by the Millions Club to M. Chayet.

It was emphasised how the people of France were fighting with unflinching courage to make democracy safe.

The leader of the Opposition resumed the debate on the Address in Reply in the Legislative Assembly.

The Premier followed Mr. Storey, the speeches of both leaders being listened to by a comparatively full House.

The debate in the Council was resumed by Dr. Nash, who criticised the Government for the delay in building ships.

Mr. Ashford states that the great majority of returned soldiers settled on the land were proving successful.

Funds have been set apart for the relief of the wives of Australian soldiers who might be in distress in England.

The Federal Government cannot see its way to adopt the suggestion for a special contingent wearing kilts.

An exciting chase took place in the city yesterday, two detectives pursuing a man who had escaped from their custody.

The man was stopped in Castlereagh-street by a civilian, and was then arrested by a constable.

At the abattoirs inquiry the depot at Pyrmont was stated to be unsuitable for present requirements.

A deputation waited on the Minister for Railways to protest against the increased fares on the Strathfield to Hornsby line.

The Hospital Employees' Union has decided to withdraw its affiliation from the Labour Council.

The Canistermakers' Union decided to remain loyal to the Labour Council.

A conference of union delegates has been convened to consider the proposals for the creation of the Labour Federation.

The Prohibition League has decided to appeal to the Federal Government for prohibition until the end of the war.

It is protesting against the sale by the police authorities of confiscated liquors seized at sly-grog establishments.

The shipping tribunal constituted under the Commonwealth shipbuilding scheme sat in Sydney yesterday for the first time.

The members heard evidence at the naval dockyards on the disputes as to demarcation and illegal victimisation.

A report of the joint committee upon expenditure on naval bases was presented to the Federal Parliament yesterday.

It was considered that the work being carried out at the Flinders and Henderson bases should be expedited.

Two of the hotel proprietors at Charleville have acceded to the hotel girls' demand for higher wages.

The other hotels are holding out. A compulsory conference between the parties has been summoned.

At the Homebush sales the market for sheep was weaker, but cattle were slightly dearer.

Investment stocks claimed most attention on the Stock Exchange yesterday, and a solid business resulted at varying rates.

The wholesale price of vinegar has been fixed. Manufactured metals sold at high rates yesterday.

There was some inquiry for woolpacks. Branbags were very scarce.

Forecast: Cloudy and unsettled, with scattered rain, chiefly south of the Lachlan; some thunder and hail likely, snow on the southern highlands; otherwise fine, with a cold night.

WARRIGAL COAT SWEATERS. PEAPES' AUSTRALIAN MAKE.

Frosty mornings—bitterly cold nights. Away from the fireside one feels the need for warm garments. Wear a Coat-sweater—the garment that supplies ample warmth but allows unrestricted activity. Slip it on like a coat—no need to remove any garment but the coat—button it up the front—thrust your hands deep into the spacious pockets. Result—glowing warmth and real comfort.

"Warrigal" Sweaters (brand registered by Peapes) are made in Australia.

The evidence of experts, taken in commission, proves that Australian-made garments are equal, if not superior, to any from abroad.

PRACTICAL PATRIOTISM

Woman and War Time.

IN the everyday life of the Commonwealth there exists the vital necessity to increase production and create new wealth, and although invididual effort is of much importance, co-operation will accomplish a great deal more—the co-operation of manufacturer and consumer.

The woman who controls the spending power of the purse has opportunity to co-operate in many ways, even through the grocery purchase. For instance, when needing a really good Worcestershire Sauce always get

PEPS—
The Remedy
that goes direct to the Lungs.

COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, SORE THROAT, AND WINTER CHEST TROUBLES.

PEPS are the True Remedy

EVERY sufferer needs the soothing, healing medicine which goes through the throat to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at its source, disperses the germs of disease, and banishes the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine—for Coughs, Colds, and Throat Troubles, is PEPS.

Simply place a Peps tablet on the tongue, and it dissolves in the mouth. The germ-killing, healing, and soothing fumes which fill the mouth, descend through the throat and down the bronchial tubes to the deepest and smallest air-cells in the lungs. All parts are impregnated with the rich, pure medicinal essences of Peps. The warm glow of relief, which every sufferer longs for, is felt in the throat and chest. Swollen, inflamed tissues are soothed and eased; coughing is promptly allayed, and hard, stringy phlegm loosened so that it comes up easily.

Peps, which embody all the best virtues of the open-air treatment, provide a natural remedy for all sufferers from coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, weak chest, sore throat, and other throat and chest troubles. The unique composition of Peps, entirely superseding all liquid cough medicines, enable the ever handy tablets to be taken by young and old, at any time, anywhere. Peps are indispensable, and a box should be kept handy in every home—in every coat pocket.

Children's Fearful Coughs and Colds Banished.

"My two children suffered from severe colds," writes Ethel Nyes, of 54 McKenzie-street, Leichhardt, Sydney, "which were accompanied with such fearful coughs that I became very anxious. My mother, who had herself been cured of bronchitis by Peps, strongly advised me to administer them to the little ones. After taking a few of the Pastilles the cough ceased, phlegm was freely ejected, and a continuation of the Peps treatment completely cured them. Now we are never without a box of Peps always handy."

Watson v O'Brien.

The case was concluded in which Sydney Edward Watson, pianist, sued Alfred O'Brien, secretary of the Professional Musicians' Union, seeking to recover £500 damages for loss of a contract of employment with a theatrical producer, Mr. Sydney James, which he alleged was brought about by the illegal interference of the defendant. The defendant denied that Watson was a member of the union, and that there had been any attempt on his part to influence the plaintiff's employer. Mr. Windeyer, K.C., and Mr. Harper (instructed by Mr. N. Fawl) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Curtis (instructed by Mr. P. M. Sanders) for the defendant.

The jury, by majority, returned a verdict for the defendant.

In the case of ordinary workers 45s was fixed as the rate for forewomen and for cutters, and 30s for pressers, 1s extra being allowed for pressers for every additional lb in the weight of irons used over 12lb. DRY CLEANED COSTUME.

Beatrice Mende Sheridan, of Monteray Flats, Edgecliff, Woollahra, married woman, sued John William Turton, Charles Hope Read, and Herbert Arthur Bourne (trading as "The Suitatorium"), of 289 George-street, Sydney, for alleged unskilful dry cleaning a costume, thereby making it unserviceable, and of no use to the plaintiff; £10/10/ was claimed for damages. The defendant denied the plaintiff's allegation, and pleaded not guilty. Mr. Mocatta, instructed by Messrs. Perkins, Stevenson and Co., appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. L. J. M'Kean, instructed by Messrs. T. J. Dickson and Dickson, for the defendant. His Honor returned a verdict for the plaintiff for £8 8s.

The plaintiff's case was that, on February 2 last, he was being driven in a cab in Eddy-avenue, when a pair of horses, attached to a waggon, the property of the defendants, bolted, and ran into the cab, which was smashed up. Plaintiff sustained injuries to his head and concussion. The defendants denied negligence, and stated that they had complied with the traffic regulations by locking the wheels of the waggon. Mr. W. Perry, instructed by Mr. E. J. Peterson, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Sanders, instructed by Messrs. Shipway and Berne, for the defendants. The plaintiff was non-suited.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT.

Rose Ellen King, spinster, on behalf of herself and her three infant brothers, claimed, under the Workmen's Compensation Act of 1916, £500 from the Railway Commissioners, for the death of her brother, Sydney Charles Cyril King, on whom the claimants were dependent. In support of the claim it was stated Sydney C. C. King, on February 23 last, had been collecting tickets for the Commissioners on a Bankstown to Sydney train. When near the Illawarra line signal-box at Redfern he was thrown off the train and killed. The respondents stated that the accident did not arise in the course of King's employment, and that when the accident happened he was on a part of the train not incidental to his employment, and not necessary for the discharge of his duties, and that the injury to him was the consequence of his taking unnecessary risk. Mr. D. S. Edwards, instructed by Mr. R. G. C. Roberts, appeared for the claimants, and Mr. E. A. Barton, instructed by Mr. J. S. Cargill, Solicitor for Railways, for the respondents.

POULTRY.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. S.—It is not likely that any poultry breeder of experience would attempt to breed from a bird affected in the manner stated. While many hold it is caused by too early roosting, the most experienced opinion is that it can be hereditary.

H. R. (Marrickville).—You need not destroy the bird or isolate it. You can only persevere in the treatment mentioned.

Amateur.—Probably the cause is due to a lack of shell-forming material, which can only be supplied by having plenty of shell-grit available for the fowls at all times. It may also be caused by disease or over-stimulation as a result of feeding condiments.

The poultry conference at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College on Saturday promises to be one of the most interesting held since their inauguration. The Minister for Agriculture, Mr. W. C. Grahame, will preside, and deliver an opening address, after which the prize certificates won in the 1917-18 egg-laying competitions will be presented. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. H. W. Potts, principal of the college, Mr. Jas. Hadlington, poultry expert, and Mr. A. L. Wyndham, poultry instructor.

Mr. J. F. Dalrymple, of Penshurst, forwards a copy of "Blue Ribbon Reds," a book dealing with Rhode Island Reds, their origin, and the position they occupy in the poultry world in the United States. Of their origin it is pointed out that there are two varieties of Rhode Island Reds—the rose and the single comb. The breeds of fowls used in the making of the Rhode Island Reds were the Red Java, imported from Java and islands in the vicinity to the United States, the Chittagong, the Red Malay, and Cochin China.

Accompanied by Mr. Jas. Hadlington, Government poultry expert, Mr. J. B. Merrett, editor of the "New Zealand Poultry Journal," and the well-known authority on matters affecting the poultry industry in the Dominion, has visited the Hawkesbury Agricultural College, and inspected the poultry farm there, together with the birds competing in the egg-laying competitions. He also spent the early part of the week, with Mr. Hadlington, visiting a number of poultry farms.

Speaking of his impressions to a "Herald" reporter, he said that as to commercial poultry farming, from what he had seen, he thought that this branch of the industry appeared to be much weaker here than in New Zealand. The New Zealand Poultry Association, with which he was closely identified, had a membership of 5000, and its work had been most valuable in developing the industry on its commercial side. Its annual conference was composed of delegates from the commercial egg circles and co-operative bodies attached to the industry. The deliberations of such a body carried a good deal of weight. The requests of the conference always received the sympathetic consideration of the Minister for Agriculture and the officers of his department, as its views represented the opinion of the bulk of New Zealand poultry-keepers. "The poultry branch of the New Zealand Agricultural Department is well organised," continued Mr. Merrett. Three poultry instructors imparted information and instruction to the New Zealand farmers, the object being not so much to create poultry farms, but to encourage production of eggs and poultry on the farms in the country. It was realised that the farmer, through the medium of his family, could help poultry production, and many of the wives and daughters of farmers did so. The poultry instructors were all practical men, and part of their time was taken up in attending shows and judging the utility poultry classes, which were a very great feature at the shows in the Dominion. In this connection both the fancier and the utility breeder had come together in New Zealand, and had decided on a utility standard for certain breeds, and by which they could be judged in the classes set apart for them. These standards, together with coloured plates, typifying the different breeds, were to be published by the Department of Agriculture and distributed to poultry-keepers.

As to breeds most favoured, White Leghorns occupied a foremost position. Brown Leghorns, which are a very fine variety, and, in Mr. Merrett's opinion, the hardiest of all the Leghorns, were very popular. Black Orpingtons held pride of place; but Silver Wyandottes had gone back somewhat. Rhode Island Reds were also popular.

A SOLICITOR CHARGED.

WEST MAITLAND, Thursday.

At the West Maitland Police Court to-day, before Mr. A. Gates, P.M., Denis Leo Benedict Glasheen, a solicitor, was committed for trial at the Maitland Quarter Sessions on August 20 on two charges, firstly that he obtained the sum of £100 from Cecilia Mary Anne Pierce by means of false pretence, and secondly, that he obtained £100 upon a forged memorandum of mortgage purporting to be executed by Frederick Ward. Bail was allowed, self in £250, and two sureties of £250.

SHIPPING TRIBUNAL.

The Shipping Tribunal, which was constituted under the Commonwealth Shipbuilding scheme, sat in Sydney yesterday for the first time. Mr. Connington is the chairman, Mr. M'Affer the Government's representative, and Mr. Duggan the unions' representative. The members of the tribunal visited the Cockatoo Naval Dockyards yesterday afternoon, and heard evidence regarding a number of disputes concerning demarcation and alleged victimisation. Amongst the unions interested in the inquiry are the Engine Drivers, Electricians, Plumbers, and Ironworkers.

MERCHANTS AND SHIPPING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—From time to time complaints have appeared from merchants in southern capitals, who find great difficulty in procuring sufficient tonnage to convey their merchandise to Sydney. This difficulty is causing serious consequences at both ends, and is bound to affect employment. This state of matters could surely in part be ameliorated by utilising commandeered steamers to take back general cargo, instead of sending them here empty.

The reason assigned for placing our steamers under a shipping board was to economise tonnage, and obtain the best possible results from it, by preventing, inter alia, steamers from returning empty; but, like all undertakings under the aegis of Government, this has not been realised, and commandeered steamers return from other States without cargo, ignoring the requirements of traders.

Commandeered steamers returning from Victoria or South Australia are sent empty to Newcastle for coal cargoes, and they pass southern jetties owned by collieries that, since the late strike, are only working occasionally. If some of them were loaded at these jetties, instead of running all the way to Newcastle, they could on every occasion be loaded and on their way back to Melbourne or elsewhere before they could have arrived in Newcastle, thus saving 240 miles on their voyage, delays at Newcastle, as well as wages and stores, and charter money, to the taxpayer.

Possibly a reconstitution of the Shipping Board might alter matters and effect economies that apparently are considered too trivial to be rendered.

I am, etc.,

Rheumatic pains stopped

Concentration is of vital importance to the success of anything. And any problem that will not yield to concentration is unsolvable. It is the art of aggregating power from many sources and using it as a whole, complete unit.

Pain, the great wrecker of human happiness—pain, that does not discriminate between young or old—is one of the problems and miseries of life that yield with marvellous speed to the sinking, penetrating influence of concentration—to concentration of medicinal essences, scientifically compounded into a complete, perfect whole and called "Wawn's Wonder-Wool."

The terrible, racking, unbearable pains of rheumatism are dispelled by the pleasing, tingling warmth of Wawn's Wonder-Wool which concentrates its soothing powers on any pain-afflicted part of the human body.

Use Wawn's Wonder-Wool—the magic wrap that makes pain stop—for rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, gout, lung troubles, sore throat, neuralgia, toothache, abdominal pains, backache, sprains, strain, headache.

Provide against a sudden attack of nerve pain—of any kind—by invariably having Wawn's Wonder-Wool in the house.

Mrs. A. H. Cameron, of 46 Queen Street, Woollahra, N.S.W., writes:

"It is now some little time since I used your Wonder-Wool on my husband when he was in such excruciating pain with nerves and rheumatism, and feel that I would like to let you know that I think your Wonder-Wool is indeed wonderful in its pain-relieving properties, being almost immediate in action in the very worst attacks. I have already recommended it to many people both friends and casual acquaintances. You may show this to any one and I hope that should you use it, it may be the means of relieving some sufferer from neuritis or nerves by inducing him or her to try a package of your wool. Wishing you every success."

Obtainable from your chemist or store—2/6 per packet—or direct from the manufacturer

ON THE LAND.

SAVING THE CALVES.

The scheme submitted by the Minister for Lands, having for its object the saving and rearing of many calves that the dairy farmers do not rear under present conditions, is likely soon to take practical shape. It has on the whole been so satisfactorily received by those directly concerned that Mr. Ashford has placed the scheme before the Cabinet for consideration of the extent to which it shall be put into operation. Investigations have been conducted by direction of Mr. Ashford to secure the co-operation of butter and cheese factories to the extent of utilising waste products, such as whey, butter-milk, and skim-milk, with the addition of grain and hay for the feeding and rearing of calves. It was considered that the most efficient and expeditious means of meeting the requirements of the scheme would be to establish depots at the factories, as a preliminary step towards the encouragement of farmers to establish group depots for community purposes, from which the natural evolution would be the endeavour of individual farmers to adopt a sound system of feeding by which to rear more calves than they have been doing. From replies received to circular inquiries, Mr. Ashford is satisfied not only that much useful work has already been accomplished through the investigation, but that the extension of the movement is only a matter for organisation.

Apart from individuals who have been consulted, the scheme has been placed before the managements of more than 200 factories, and 175 replies have been received. The general tone indicates friendly interest in the proposals of the Government. The shortage of cattle is generally admitted, and although in several cases it is not possible, for various reasons, for the factories to act in the immediate future, there is a possibility of, at least, 30 factories making a commencement when the details of the scheme have been finally approved, and definite arrangements can now be entered into with six of these.

Mr. Ashford stated yesterday that he was gratified to find that the scheme had been so universally well received. "Adverse criticism had been of a minor and isolated character, and the officer who has been placing the proposals before the directors of factories, reported that in only one instance was their final consideration and adoption deferred until a subsequent meeting. In many instances farmers and directors of factories have expressed in writing their satisfaction at finding something is being done to meet the depletion of stock, and generous offers of assistance have been made.

CLOSER SETTLEMENT.

The Minister for Lands yesterday replied to a statement made in the House of Representatives by Mr. Lynch, that 66 per cent. of the men who had taken up land under the Closer Settlement Acts in New South Wales were "on the rocks." Mr. Ashford said that investigation showed that the actual position was that 78 per cent. of the settlers were up to date in their rentals, and no question as far as the Lands Department was concerned arose as to their stability. From the fact that they had paid their rentals it could be assumed they were in a fairly good financial position. There were 14 per cent. who, owing to disastrous experience during the last two seasons, had asked for limited postponements of payment, which had been granted. With a reasonable season they should be able to wipe out their indebtedness. "The remaining 8 per cent. of the settlers concerned," added Mr. Ashford, "may, as Mr. Lynch says, be considered 'on the rocks.' But it does not follow that the land itself is unsuitable, but that these men are, more or less, unsuited for land settlers. Although it is regrettable that these 8 per cent. of the settlers are backward with their rent, in every case the Lands Department is thoroughly safeguarded by the additional value placed on the land. Every possible sympathetic treatment is meted out to settlers under ordinary conditions, but this has been especially the case since the war."

In regard to land settlement, Mr. Ashford added that it could be taken generally that the share-farmer who had made share-farming pay was undoubtedly one of the finest types of farmers they had in the State. Nevertheless, unfortunately, circumstances at times show that in some cases, when it comes to managing their own farms, amongst those who have been failures as settlers on fairly suitable land, are men who have been successful previously as share-farmers. Apparently they lacked the necessary initiative.

THE WINE INDUSTRY.

The importance of the wine industry in this State is brought under notice in an attractive and effective way by a well-arranged exhibit in the window of Challis House. The display is being made by the Winegrowers' Association, under the auspices of the Primary Industries League, and is arousing considerable interest. The different phases of wine production are brought under notice, and the desire is to promote greater interest in the industry and a fuller realisation of the opportunity it affords of promoting profitable land settlement.

GRASSES AND FODDER PLANTS.

At the last meeting of the agricultural section of the Royal Society, Mr. E. Breakwell pointed out the valuable work which might be done in the cultivation of native and introduced grasses and fodder plants at public schools. Mention was made of the important series of experiments carried out by Mr. Hinder, of Tallewang Public School, with Sudan grass, which were so valuable and far-reaching that they were quoted throughout the Press of the State. Just recently some important notes on the growth of native grasses and fodder plants had been received from Nyngan, Leeton, and Canbelego Public Schools. At Nyngan Coolah grass (Panicum prolutum) gave a computed yield of 1 ton 1 cwt of hay per acre. Texas grass (Panicum bulbosum), 2 tons 8cwt per acre; while at Leeton Coolah grass gave, without irrigation, a yield of over 4 tons of hay per acre. The pupils of Leeton school also spoke highly of Early Spring grass (Erichloa annulata), and assert that local dairymen consider this grass an excellent fodder plant, and one exceedingly palatable to dairy cows. Sudan grass and the grain sorghums did so well at Canbelego school that the local Press drew the attention of neighbouring farmers to them. The data obtained by the pupils on the growth of our native grasses were extremely valuable, and justified a considerable extension of this work, even if a small expense was involved in its supervision.

GUM FORESTS.

It will be remembered that a short time ago the attention of the Minister for Lands was drawn to the heavy growth of young gum trees which had appeared in the Wagga district on Gobbagumbalin settlement, as a result of the land being flooded several times during recent years. The Minister held the opinion that it might be a wise course to resume the land concerned for forestry purposes, and arranged for the Forest Commissioners, Messrs. Hay and Jolley, to inspect the area. The commissioners have done so, and reported against the proposal. They pointed out that from inquiries made it might be 30 years or more before the land was again flooded, and, consequently, the young timber would not be growing under conditions conducive to good results. It would be preferable to depend upon flooded country for such forestry development. In view of the commissioners' recommendation, Mr. Ashford has turned the proposal down.

SHIRE VALUATIONS.

ALBURY.—The Hume Shire Council has determined to make a vigorous protest to the Local Government Department against the proposed new acreage system of valuing share lands viz., by an acreage charge on the holdings instead of a bulk charge against the revenue as a whole, as adopted in the past. The president said that the Hume valuation had been done for an annual charge of £50, but if the change was brought about the impost for valuation would probably exceed a thousand pounds.

The Department of Agriculture has arranged for the following lectures and demonstrations:—

RELIGIOUS LITERATURE.

THE NEW OUTLOOK.

Mr. W. P. Livingstone, the author of a book with the above title, undertakes to interpret to us the significance of the new age opening up before our eyes, which yet is so full of uncertainty and mystery. For that new age there has been a process of preparation long before the war broke out, though the war has intensified the situation. The war "shook the organisation of society to its foundations, broke down the conventions of life, and brought humanity face to face with the realities of existence." It raised immediately questions of the utmost importance touching our faith in God and the nature of God. Many believed that the crash of this tragedy of war would drive men and women everywhere to God, and fill our churches with a devout and penitent people. It has not been so. The war has undoubtedly roused many Christians, who were not only at ease, but asleep, in Zion, while on the other hand it has paralysed the faith of others, and made belief in God more difficult. The catastrophe has thrown everything into confusion for the time being, religion included. Mr. Livingstone realises this, and endeavours to meet the new situation by expounding the meaning of religion as the ideal of life. It is the right way, for it exhibits the power of religion to control life under all conditions. Mr. Livingstone is more than ready to accept scientific theories which so far are only probabilities of varied degree, for he is determined to find no difficulties in any reasonable conception of material forces. As he says, "Searching back over the past is like looking at a landscape at night with a lantern. We can discern what is in line with the rays of light, but not what lies beyond." If the scientist says that there has been no break in the continuity of things, and that life is but a higher development of the activity behind all, so that the difference between living and non-living matter is much less than we have assumed in the past, well then, so be it, what it means is that nature in every form is more "vital" than we had thought. But the very existence of such a force working towards higher and more perfect expression implies a directivity residing in a power responsible for evolving order out of chaos. If man himself be but a machine he is a most remarkable machine, for he knows himself to be a machine, and in so far as he does so he is not a machine. So, too, mere force cannot explain or account for man and the universe. Thus we arrive at God and religion, which is neither creed, code, nor philosophy, but simply a relationship or attitude to the Supreme Power. That relationship is one of love and dependence best exemplified by that of the child in a home. This last conception is the author's idea of what religion implies, a filial attitude to God, and the remainder of the book is the application of this idea to every phase of life and every degree of human experience. Something like this has been said again and again, but it would be wrong to assume that this book is a commonplace repetition of certain platitudes of religion. The book is a frank, reverent, and original restatement of the essential things of religion, in some respects boldly departing from orthodox ideas, though not from the faith which gave birth to the ideas in forms historically familiar to us. The chief gain of the book is its insistence upon the real meaning of religion, and its persistent assertion that religion and its experiences are the most natural thing in human life.

BIBLICAL ARCHEOLOGY.

This volume of over 600 pages was well worth writing if the man who undertook the task knew his business. And it may at once be said that Dr. Cobern does know his business, which was to gather together the record of archeological research so far as this bears upon the New Testament times. If he cannot claim to be an expert he can fairly claim to know the field, and conducts us over it with the interest of an enthusiast and with the skill of a scholar. If his claim, as stated by himself, lacks the note of modesty, it is not without some justification. He says "This book has no competitor, for it is the pioneer work in this field. Specialists have written many ponderous volumes touching limited areas of the general subject, but no one has previously attempted to give a summary of all the discoveries in all lands, so far as these, in any important way, have cast light upon the New Testament writings or the life of the Primitive Church." This is hardly correct, but it may be granted to the author that other attempts in the same direction are not so recent, and that he has the advantage of including in his volume the remarkable discoveries at Oxyrhynchus and other towns of Egypt, and it is the bearing of these upon the New Testament writings which gives its chief value to this book. It is a pleasantly written, popular account of N. T. archeology done by a man who knows the literature on the subject, who has visited many of the places referred to, and who has the scholarship to appreciate the bearing of recent discoveries.

A considerable but not disproportional section of the book is taken up with information regarding recently-discovered papyri and their bearing upon the language of the New Testament. While the MSS. of the N. T. preserved to us are written on parchment or vellum, these documents are written upon the more perishable papyri (paper). Buried beneath the dry sand of Egypt these letters and other documents have been preserved for two thousand years. Most of the discoveries have been made in the Fayum district, about 50 miles south-west of Cairo. Especially in the buried town of Oxyrhynchus many thousands of letters, bills of sales, contracts, and account books have been dug up. One of the surprises is the amount of ordinary correspondence which passed in those far off days. Fathers, mothers, and boys wrote to one another as regularly as they do to-day, and the Egyptian post-office must have been quite a busy organisation. Women wrote to their tradesmen complaining of the quality of the bread or the prices charged, boys wrote characteristic schoolboy letters home, containing not a little bad grammar and bad spelling. The interest to the student of the Bible is that in many of these documents he finds Greek words used which hitherto have been known only through the New Testament and with a significance which throws a flood of light upon N. T. Greek. The revolutionary discovery was first made by Deissmann that N. T. Greek was not a peculiar type of its own but the common speech of the day as distinguished from literary Greek. In these papyri we find the language of the N. T. to be the "Koine" or vulgar tongue of the age, and not a few of the characteristic N. T. terms which have hitherto been interpreted through Attic Greek are now seen to have quite different significance as used in popular speech and writing. All this is already known through the writings of such men as Deissmann, Moulton, and Milligan; but Dr. Cobern puts it in an easily-read form, though not with the charm of Moulton's little book on the same subject, "New Light from the Egyptian Rubbish Heaps." Other sections of Part I. of the volume deal with the more recently discovered N. T. MSS., and such early documents as the "Didache" and the "Shepherd of Hermas."

Part II. gives a quite adequate sketch of the bearing upon N. T. times of monumental inscriptions in Rome and the cities of Western Asia. It is a popular account of what was familiar to scholars for some time, but gathered here to complete this study in Biblical archeology. The volume is intended for other than experts, but these are not the only ones interested in this fresh light on the N. T. To such this book will be very welcome and will deserve all the welcome it receives.

MR. W. T. NIXON,

Representing at Cowra the well-known firm of George Shirley Ltd., Bent-st., Sydney, N.S.W., writes his opinion of Clements Tonic.

After personal experience he regards it as a wonder-medicine, to which his improved state of health testifies.

"Cowra, May 4th, 1918.

"CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.

"Please accept my heart-felt thanks for your Clements Tonic.

"It might be rather soon to report regarding its good qualities, but though I have only taken two bottles of it I APPEAR TO HAVE TAKEN ON A NEW LIFE. My appetite is now good, whereas before taking on this 'wonder' tonic my stomach usually turned against the most appetising meal. Not so now, for I am ALWAYS ready for meal time; not only this, but I now enjoy my meals without the usual sinking feeling and muddled head that has for months past followed the taking of even the lightest meal.

"Friends have been advising me to 'diet' myself, and up to a point I have had to do so. I find no necessity for it now, as by taking regular doses of your tonic I find I can eat and digest almost anything.

"Again thanking you, believe me, yours sincerely,

"(Sgd.)—W. T. NIXON,

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1918.

THE GREAT BATTLE.

It is clear from the official messages that the battle on the southern front still rages with unabated violence. In addition to continuing their advance on Compiegne, the Germans have begun another vigorous attack in the direction of Villers Cotterets. Their first assaults westward have gained them two villages, but they have been held back on the first of the roads which leads from the bank of the Aisne to the Forest. North of the Aisne they have reaped the fruits of their successes during the past week. The French have been compelled to evacuate a salient which was the scene of very heavy fighting, both during the first phase of the offensive, and during the first days of the attack on the Aisne heights. Such places as Sampigny and Mont Renaud were worthy of a stubborn defence, when there was a good prospect of holding the valley of the Oise, and a possibility of attacking the enemy between Lassigny and Noyon. During the German advance to Montdidier the German line seemed so vulnerable that there were rumours of a great attack by General Foch, and of many thousands of German prisoners, as there were rumours of a Russian landing in Belgium when there seemed a possibility of cutting the German communications in the opening days of the war. The successful advance to Ribecourt and to the junction of the Oise and the Matz has made this salient both useless and dangerous. The French have, therefore retired to another short line, on which they will struggle to prevent the enemy penetrating the first of the Compiegne forests. The retirement is only one among many instances of the skill with which the enemy uses his power of initiative. He may be defeated and held at one point, possibly a point on which he has concentrated his greatest strength. He will nevertheless gain his ends by a successful attack elsewhere, which will compel the defence to withdraw to save isolation. The positions to the westward of the Oise have not materially altered since the date of the last message published yesterday. The advance towards Estrees has been held. The French counter-attacks have been continued, and on the German right have gained further ground. In the extreme southern part of the battlefield the French and the Americans have counter-attacked, and there they have reoccupied points on the road system between the Marne and Villers Cotterets. There is some suggestion that the Germans, having greatly improved their line, may pause for reorganisation. But every detail in the official messages tells of an obstinate attack, and an equally obstinate defence. There is no sign of weakening on either side. Each is fighting as if it knew that the stakes are life or death. The Germans have followed their practice of putting their whole weight into every blow. The French have not sacrificed life uselessly, but they have resisted in the knowledge that ground here is almost as valuable as men, since each step given up detracts from the freedom of their army to manoeuvre and from the safety of vital positions. The enemy is fighting now to gain control of a complex road system, and thereby to destroy the utility of natural defences such as hills and forests. But he is gradually drawing nearer towns which are almost suburbs of Paris, and which he will hope to drench with gas, as he has already drenched Armentieres and other towns.

In such a battle as this it is no comfort to be told that the enemy have not advanced as far as they had expected in a given time. Boastful forecasts may have been issued to hearten the troops, or may represent hopes rather than anticipations. There has been no battle in the war, except perhaps the battle of the Marne, in which the Germans have not been prepared to continue their effort after they have failed to keep the timetable attributed to them. It is an outcome of the same persistence and thoroughness that if they at any time come short of their full ambition they have a secondary aim in reserve. The first phase of the offensive did not reach Amiens or divide the French army from the British. It was justified, nevertheless, by the losses inflicted, by the increased difficulties of movement imposed on the Allies, and by the added danger to vital positions. The French will fight to the utmost for the preservation of their capital. They are already meeting the enemy with that combination of skill and courage, with a power of recuperation in adversity, which no other people has ever exhibited in an equal degree. They will receive from British and American armies all the help which they are capable of sending. But though this battle should not end in the fall of the capital, or of one of its outposts, it has assuredly added very much to the labours of the defence. Their line has been lengthened once again and one more centre has been threatened so seriously that reinforcements cannot be moved from its neighbourhood to any other point. One more obstacle has been added to the task of collecting the reserves for a successful counter-offensive. The factor in the ultimate decision of which the Allied critics are in ignorance, and which is of final importance, is the German losses. The Germans make light of them, adding that with modern tactics the defence loses more heavily than the attack, especially when as under the conditions of their offensive the attacking force is always in superior numbers. That reasoning must lose its force when success is delayed, and the attack is still persisted in. When the numbers become approximately equal, and the defence is prepared with its machine guns, an army attacking in massed formation must suffer terribly. This battle is imposing a terrible toll on all the nations engaged in it. It is completing the destruction of a generation which has grown to manhood in the presence of death. But the stubborn resistance of the French is imposing the heaviest strain on the belligerent which is least able to renew its strength, and is giving the youngest of its Allies time to train its army so that vigour and courage will not be wasted for lack of experience.

BRITAIN AND AUSTRALIA.

With the news of Great Britain's purchase of the wool clips of Australia while the war lasts and for twelve months afterwards the people of this continent get an idea of the importance of the Empire relation. The value of two clips so far has reached a hundred millions; and should the war last another two years, as it may easily do, we shall have assured to us a payment of at least one hundred and fifty millions sterling for the three seasons—if we can grow the wool. Everything, of course, will depend upon the seasons. But the significance of this last deal with Great Britain lies in the effect of it upon our financial future. Our staple product, profitably disposed of while the war lasts and after, involves general stability for public and private finance if it is wisely controlled, since the millions of money coming in must pass through all the arteries of trade and industry. They will thus maintain the equilibrium of a thousand activities which depend upon our continued access to the markets of the world with the raw products upon which our prosperity depends. But the further fact is that we are getting twice as much for our wool as before. In the five years up to 1916 the average annual value of the Commonwealth's wool was a little over twenty-five millions sterling. To-day we are discussing an annual export value averaging fifty millions; and in this regard the war is not only helping us materially in a time of exceptional stress and difficulty, but it is actually proving a very profitable investment. This is the purely business side of a great transaction. The other side is the mother country's desperate need of help. She is keeping us in comfort, no doubt, because our wool must be obtained, and she is paying a high price for the whole of it because it is the best thing to do in the circumstances. It is a matter of business on both sides. But we are only enjoying the benefits of safe trading in this fashion because Great Britain is pouring out her life's blood in a full stream, and is prepared to surrender the last drop, rather than see Germany's ruthless heel planted upon the world's neck.

Australia is no safer than Britain's manhood can make it: and the millions we are drawing, and hope still to draw, from the needs of the Allies will vanish like mist after sunrise unless the German onslaughts are not only held but doubled back till victory is obtained. The lesson of this wonderful wool deal, therefore, has two sides to it. We are bound in honour to fulfil our pledge of the last man and the last shilling; but it is our supreme interest so to do. If there were no pledge, and though honour counted for nothing in our thought of the Empire, it would still be essential to our safety to make an Allied victory sure; and we can only assure victory by ourselves putting every eligible man into the firing lines. But this pouring upon us of so much money, or its exchange equivalents, must raise the issue of our financial duty to the mother country. An assured financial outlook has its difficulties and temptations. The Treasurer with a surplus is always a Minister in perplexity, for every member of Parliament and each department of State make urgent demand for a share of it. We shall find it easy to go on in the heedless way of the years since war began; and money will still be plentiful. But clearly the war is going to place heavier and still heavier burdens upon us; and common sense suggests that our financial good fortune should be an opportunity for economy so that no future demand shall find us failing to meet it. It is a paradox of extravagance that money to burn is an assurance of want. Nothing but stern economy now, with our wool so well sold, will save us when the climax of the war is reached, and after. We are all beneficiaries in this wool deal. Not the woolgrowers alone but the Commonwealth from end to end, and every individual in it, will get something out of the transaction: and it is not folly but wisdom to identify ourselves with wool whether we live in the city or count our gains in the country. This is not a word merely for State finance and for Commonwealth spendings on other things than war, it is the imperative call to the individual everywhere. But nothing is sure, even so, until Germany is beaten: and our first and last business to-day is to make this good fortune brought by our wool a fresh reason for sending reinforcements in full volume and for getting busy and keeping busy in the Empire's war.

VIOLET DAY.

Violet Day! Violet Day!
What do the fragrant blossoms say
To the world as it throngs on its busy way?
Our fragrance stands for the tender thought
For the men who fight, and the men who've fought;
Our sweetness stands for the kindly deed
And loving service to those in need.
Our purple sheen in its kingly pride,
In deep remembrance of those who died,
Who have trodden the summit of sacrifice,
And there right royally paid the price.
Let every bloom bring the thought that they
Have died to save YOU—on Violet Day!
Violet Day! Violet Day!
Will you heed the message the blossoms say?
If you do you will know of your debt, and PAY.

PERSONAL.

At a meeting of the executive of the Red Cross Society yesterday the chairman extended congratulations to Mr. Adrian Knox, K.C., C.M.G., upon the honour recently conferred on him by the King.

Cable advice has been received that Major C. H. Cropper, M.C., of the Royal Engineers, brother of Mr. C. W. Cropper, secretary of the Australian Jockey Club, has been again mentioned in despatches, and has been awarded the Distinguished Service Order. Major Cropper has been on active service in France since March, 1915, and has been once wounded.

Mr. Thomas Longworth, of Woollahra House, Rose Bay, has two sons at the front. Yesterday he was informed by cablegram that his son, William, who is best known as our champion long-distance swimmer, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant.

Mr. Arthur Cooper, for many years general secretary of the Federated Seamen's Union of Australasia, who was recently appointed a member of the new Board of Trade, was on Wednesday last entertained at Paris House by his friends.

At the Paddington Police Court on Thursday Mr. Payten, Stipendiary Magistrate, on behalf of the Paddington police, presented Mr. Aubrey Mowle with a gold-mounted pocket wallet, inscribed "A memento of esteem from police of No. 10 Division." Mr. Mowle was Clerk of Petty Sessions and Chamber Magistrate at Paddington for more than 10 years, and retired from the Public service on May 3.

LABOUR FEDERATION.

TO COMBAT I.W.W. ELEMENT.

A conference of union delegates will be held at the Trades Hall to-morrow afternoon to consider the proposals for the creation of the Labour Federation of New South Wales, and to discuss the general policy of the new movement.

It is expected that there will be a representative gathering of trade-unionists. Many expressions of disapproval by unions associated with the Labour Council show that there is a decided drift towards the new body.

The Hospital Employees' Union, at a special general meeting, decided to withdraw its affiliation from the New South Wales Labour Council by 31 votes to 6.

Mr. Mitchell, secretary to the union, stated yesterday that one of the main objections they had against the Council was that it had been dealing in political and abstract matters while it had deliberately neglected problems of genuine trade-union concern. The opinions of the delegates on the Council were not in accord with the opinions of the rank and file of the movement. They also felt that the Council's recent expressions on voluntary recruiting were contrary to the real sentiment of the movement. Control of the Council had been secured by delegates who, while denouncing the policy which had raised the movement to a higher pinnacle than it had attained hitherto, had no substitute policy when shorn of their cry for direct action. The union also endorsed the policy as outlined in the new Labour Federation. They must grapple with the problems of the high cost of living, and make the strongest effort possible before the Board of Trade to secure a living wage for males and for females, based upon a more comprehensive scale than assented to at present. The policy of the new federation was also to focus attention upon apprenticeship, unemployment, profiteering, and other industrial questions, concentrating their intelligence to solve or minimise these and like problems. They hoped by forming the new body that they would be able to prevent extremists from achieving their objective, namely, the disorganisation of the trade-union movement. The extreme elements were striving to throw overboard the industrial arbitration laws, and resort to the tactics advocated so boldly in the past by the I.W.W., namely, direct action. They knew from experience the evils that followed the I.W.W. propaganda in New South Wales.

At a meeting of the Canistermakers Union it was decided to remain loyal to the Labour Council.

SOLDIERS' BUSINESS VENTURES.

WARNING BY THE MINISTER.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The Minister for Repatriation, Senator Millen, said to-day that he desired if necessary to utter a word of warning as a result of certain cases which had recently come to light. Some returned soldiers had ventured into undertakings in respect of which they required the help of the department. Instead of first consulting the department they made their arrangements, paying away some of their own money, or accepting financial responsibilities, and then looked to the department to enable them to complete the undertaking. Some of those projects on examination had been found to be obviously unsound, while those who had committed themselves to them felt aggrieved that the department, recognising that the ventures must be losing ones, did not feel bound to throw good money after bad. It was obviously in the interests of the men themselves that before entering into commitments of this character, and when they needed the assistance of the department, that they should submit their proposals first, so that they might be inquired into, and the applicant informed whether the department regarded the project as sound, and of the assistance which it was proposed to render.

ITALY'S DAY.

PREMIER'S APPEAL.

"It is difficult for Australians, living so far from the seat of the struggle, and previously so little concerned with the inter-relations of the contesting parties, to understand the enormous importance which attached to the entrance of Italy upon the side of the Allies into this great war. No other single event in the history of the war—not even the determination of America to throw off neutrality—can compare with it. Italy had been for many years a member of the Triple Alliance. She had been bound in defensive ties to Germany and to Austria. Her people had been taught to regard the Allies of to-day as her possible enemies. At the beginning of the struggle Italy, if she had entered the war at all, would in all human probability have entered it on the side of our enemies.

"The Italian nation had just completed an exhausting struggle in Libya. Her army had been engaged for two years in an African campaign against the Turkish army, from which—in spite of a continuous series of victories—they returned, nevertheless, with magazines depleted, munitions spent, and heavy losses in both officers and men, which had reduced the military power of the nation far below its normal strength. These were the considerations which for some time weighed with Italian public opinion, and created a hesitancy amongst the Ministers of that period in taking the final decision and renouncing the union with her old Allies.

"But before a few months Italy did enter the war, and she entered it on our side. This is because the Italians are a race of democrats, and because they realise—to a degree which many people in Australia have not yet realised—that this war has resolved itself into a struggle between the criminal and aggressive energies of Germany on the one hand, and the resistance of a general union of civilisation upon the other. In these circumstances the democratic spirit of the Italian people had no hesitation in determining upon its course.

"Of the magnificent part played by the Italian soldiers since their nation entered the war there is no need to speak. The most difficult frontier in the world separates Italy from Austria. The mountain ranges dividing the two countries slope gently—one might almost say treacherously—towards the enemies of our Ally, but present their most precipitous steeps to her. In the face of eternal snows, amidst all the difficulties with which nature in her sternest mood can confront them, the Italian forces have advanced from victory to victory, and had actually regained much of the territory which the Austrians in the past had taken from her, when treachery on the part of a few of her units, and an unsuspected strain of weakness on the part of others, led to the great defeat of some months ago. Since then, however, the whole nation has rallied to the restoration of the situation and the retrieving of lost ground. The Italians have vied with the French in giving a demonstration to the Anglo-Saxon world of what our Continental brothers are capable of, where the interests of liberty are at stake.

"Unhappily for us, this war—conducted so largely upon Italian territory, and throwing upon Italian industry such enormous demands in the shape of the preparing of munitions—leaves the Italian people stricken down with a large measure of unusual, unexpected impoverishment. As with the French, so with the Italians. Their men are not in the fields to secure the annual harvest, but at the front. Their industries have to be suspended whilst millions of workers are transferred to the tasks which war brings in its train. The ordinary income of the nation is greatly diminished, while the ordinary calls made upon the nation have been greatly increased.

"In these circumstances it is for us, the people of New South Wales, who have suffered none of these things, to come to the assistance of our Italian comrades. We have not had the foot of a single enemy soldier placed upon our soil. We have had not building demolished, not one acre of fertile land despoiled. We are farthest of all the Allies from the actual scene of the struggle; and it becomes us, therefore, to be doubly and trebly ready to help those who are plunged in the full stream of its losses and its miseries. It is for this reason that I appeal to my liberal-minded and free-hearted fellow-citizens to support Italian Red Cross Day."

PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL.

PERMANENT TRUSTEE COMPANY v. FELS.

The explanatory note attached to the cabled announcement of a reserved decision by the Privy Council in the appeal of the Permanent Trustee Company of New South Wales against Fels, in yesterday's issue, left an important point in the case of Dora Fels, the co-defendant in the suit, unexplained. The appeal was brought by the respondents in the suit of Bailia Minia Iankelevna Fels against the Permanent Trustee Company, Ltd., and Dora Fels, in the Equity Court of New South Wales, to obtain a declaration that the plaintiff was entitled, under a marriage settlement made in Warsaw (Poland), to one half-share in the whole of the property acquired by her husband, the late F. S. Fels, after the date of the marriage, and up to the time of his death in 1915. Mrs. Dora Fels' statement was that in the year 1888 the marriage between Minia Fels and the testator had been duly dissolved by divorce, according to the law of Russian Poland, where both were domiciled. Mrs. Dora Fels contended that the first marriage was dissolved, and that the marriage settlement only referred to property acquired during marital cohabitation, and not during coverture. She told the Court that the testator informed her that the divorce had been accepted by Minia Fels, and that the testator would never have married her had he not satisfied himself of the acceptance of the divorce by his wife. Two of testator's children by Minia Fels, when still of tender years, had been sent out by Minia Fels' father, a strictly religious Jew, to live with their father and Mrs. Dora Fels in Sydney. The Privy Council's appeal from Mr. Justice Harvey's judgment, the effect of which has been published, is pending.

These prices have been increased to 5/ a gross wholesale, while the retail prices are as given above. The price from manufacturer to wholesaler has been fixed at 4/6 a gross.

BRITISH PRISONERS OF WAR.

BEHIND THE FIRING LINE.

GERMAN SAVAGERY.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, April 16.

The committee appointed by the British Government to inquire into the treatment by the enemy of British prisoners of war has furnished its report, signed by Mr. Justice Younger, its chairman. The document is melancholy reading. It adds one more gruesome charge to the hideous account already proven against the Germans in respect of callous brutality. It is, as itself states, a record "of unjustifiable suffering for which a parallel may be hard to find in the history, tragic in so many of its incidents as that history has been, of the treatment by the enemy of their prisoners, during this war."

The report does not profess to disclose everything for the simple reason that investigation by neutral inquirers has in many districts been disallowed by the German command, and much of the information actually obtained has filtered in from indirect sources. But it will suffice. Its story is quite sufficiently brutal. Whatever else is to be revealed can only add to the tragedy and the criminality of this aspect of the German at war. This report deals only with the Western front. A similar report on the Eastern front will be presented later. And as to the Western front, it first sets out the fact, amply corroborated, that as early as August, 1916, the Germans were employing British and other prisoners in forced labour close behind the firing line, thus exposing them to the fire of the guns of their own and Allied armies. The Germans have, it is true, excused the practice, claiming that it was no more than an act of reprisal for a similar act against German prisoners on the part of the British command—a charge which, as this report says, will not bear examination.

Here is some of the evidence quoted by the report and at the outset we ourselves are directly concerned in it. For in respect of the starved condition of British prisoners in German hands and near the firing line, it is stated that an Australian private, who, starving, had fallen out of the marching ranks to pick up a piece of bread left on the roadside by Belgian women for the prisoners, was shot and killed by the guard for so doing. As to the starvation diet in general, one man says: "We used to beg the sentries to allow us to pick stinging nettles and dandelions to eat we were so hungry." As to the brutality of the German guards, this will suffice: "We were forced to work; we were given hardly any food, and when we fell down from sheer exhaustion we were kicked until we got up again."

The accommodation provided for prisoners at one camp is thus described: The sleeping-place for a large party was a barn with no roof. The rain poured in upon the men. They had to sleep and work in the same clothes. At another place, near Cambrai, "we slept about 12 in a room," says one of the men; "there was no fire, and it was very cold. We lay on loose straw, which was full of vermin. We could only wash in a bucket of cold water, without soap or towels." And another, at Lille, says: "We were 110 in a room 15 by 20. We slept on bare boards without blankets. It was so cold that the windows had to be closed at night, and of course the smell was awful. We were never given any clothes."

In the prison camps proper parcels seem to be delivered with fair regularity. But from these unfortunates behind the line parcels were systematically withheld, to their very great suffering as a result of hard and incessant work, no clothing supplies, and insufficient food. The effect upon the men is related by those who saw some of them on their escape into friendly territory. Here is a typical case. A major in the First Anzac Corps says: "Three men escaped from behind the German lines to us the other day. They had been prisoners three months, and were literally nearly dead with ill-treatment and starvation. One of them could hardly walk, and was just a skeleton. He had gone down from 13 stone to less than 8 stone in three months. I fetched him back from the line and it almost made me cry. All that awful January and February out all day in the wet and cold; no overcoat, and at night no blanket in a shelter where the clothes froze stiff on him. . . . He was one mass of vermin. . . . 'Beaten and starved,' one of these men said 'Sooner than go through it again I'd just put my head under the first railway.'"

A witness from a German camp says: "Many were brought into camp who had returned from working behind the lines. They were in a shocking state, literally skin and bone, hardly able to walk, and quite worn out physically and mentally: their clothes threadbare and in rags, without boots, wearing old rag slippers. They had to work eight hours a day, and generally were made to walk 10 kilometres out to their work, and the only food they were given was one cup of coffee, a slice of bread, and some soup a day—a day's ration."

In another camp a witness says: "In May of this year a large party of British came in from behind the German lines. They were ravenous, through being half-starved, and half savages. I spoke to several of them. Men were shot at sight for a slight cause, such as dropping out to get bread from Belgian civilians." Into that camp, too, were brought one day 300 prisoners of all nationalities. A witness says: "All were starving. . . . Fifteen Russians died as soon as they were brought in. One man told me that on a march of 11 kilometres a man fell out ill, the guard gave him so many minutes to fall in again. He could not go on, and the guard shot him."

These are only a few of the stories of witnesses who have been in contact with the sufferers. There are many other stories, and most of them a terrible revelation of German savagery. This report will have wide circulation. It will be read nowhere without anger and horror.

STATE FISH SALES.

SANITARY INSPECTOR'S CRITICISMS.

BATHURST, Thursday.

The sanitary inspector (Mr. R. Evans) reported to the Bathurst Council last night that he had visited the railway station with a view to seeing the conditions under which the State fish were disposed of to the public. He examined the fish taken from the different boxes in the truck. All were sound and wholesome. Regarding the conditions under which the fish were sold, he had to report that they were not good. The fish were in open boxes in the truck, and more or less covered with dirt and cinders. Before being sold the first were emptied on to a bench made of kerosene cases, which was so uneven that he saw fish slip off and into the mud caused by the people standing about. These fish were simply picked up, and sold without any cleaning. The fish were sold within 15ft of two open trucks loaded with sweepings, ashes, and horse manure. Some of the paper used for wrapping was printed and of soiled appearance. The council resolved to bring the matter under the notice of the Director of State Fisheries.

FRENCH DELEGATION.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

Official advice has been received by the Acting Prime Minister (Mr. Watt) regarding the French delegation which will shortly visit Australia. Mr. Watt stated that the delegation would consist of M. Metin, a distinguished ex-Minister for Labour; General Pau, a veteran of the Franco-Prussian and the present war; M. Motte, who was largely interested in the wool industry in France; M. Morel, a prominent commercial man of Bordeaux; Professor Hillier, a prominent agricultural scientist, and M. Pierre Mille, a well-known journalist. It was understood that Mr. Meadows Smith, who was attached to the British Embassy in Paris, would accompany the party as attache. Apparently the delegation was expected to arrive in Australia some time in July, but it was possible that the present serious offensive on the Western front might cause some delay in the departure from France.

WORLD'S DEBT TO FRANCE.

DEFENDER OF FREEDOM.

OUTSPOKEN ANZACS.

Splendid tributes were paid yesterday to France at the farewell luncheon tendered by the Millions Club to M. Chayet, the French Consul-General. The speakers emphasised how the people of France, with the enemy practically at the doors of their capital city, are still fighting with unflinching courage to make democracy safe.

M. Chayet knows the spirit of his people. "Rest assured," he said, "that, even if we are obliged to abandon Paris and the Germans advance farther south, we will continue to oppose them with all our strength, with all our courage. The French will not abandon the fight, even if Paris is taken." He spoke, too, of France being ready for any such eventualities, because of plans which had been long prepared for the defence of their central plateau.

Politics, the church, trade and commerce, the army, civic, and other walks of life were represented at the function. Six of the original Anzacs were the guests of the club, along with Brigadier-General Antill, C.B., C.M.G. Through Sergeant A. R. Townsend, M.M., these men presented the president of the club (Mr. Arthur Rickard), who presided, with some war souvenirs, including a German helmet, as an appreciation of his and the club's hospitality.

"We would very much like to have had another week with you," Sergeant Townsend said, "but duty is duty, and we have to go back. We can only thank God that we are still well enough to go back and relieve six more Anzacs for a trip home. We do not object to going back. What hurts us just a little is that when we left in 1914 young men about the streets waved flags to us. In 1918 we find them still waving flags. (Shame.) Nevertheless we have to go back and carry on."

Among the big gathering, in addition to the principal guests, were the Attorney-General (Mr. Hall), representing the Government, Archbishop Wright, Sir Joseph Carruthers, M.L.C., Mr. J. L. Brittain, Dr. Marano, E. Shimizu, and M. Watteeuw (consular representatives of America, Italy, Japan, and Belgium respectively); M. Moreau, and other prominent in the French community; Dr. Nash, and Messrs. A. W. Meeks, Wm. Brooks, and H. Y. Braddon, Ms.L.C., and the Chairman of Committees in the Legislative Assembly (Mr. D. Levy). Among the apologies was one from the Consul-General for China.

"The true France is now being revealed," said the chairman, amidst applause, in a tribute to M. Chayet, his country, and his people. "We all feel a tug at our heartstrings," added Mr. Rickard, "when we read of the imperishable valour of our Ally." (Applause.)

WHAT WE OWE TO FRANCE.

"We honour our departing guest," said the Attorney-General, in proposing his health, "not alone for himself, but as the representative of a race which has earned the undying gratitude of humanity. We shall never understand what we owed to France in the earlier stages of the war, when there was something like 380 or 390 miles of frontier to defend. Of this, when the war broke out, the Belgians gallantly held from 15 to 20 miles; the British, with an army regarded as contemptible—contemptible, perhaps, in numbers, but not in courage—were holding possibly another 30 or 40 miles. But for the rest—over 300 miles, from Belgium down through France—one obstacle alone stood between the Germans and the conquest of Europe. That obstacle consisted of the gallant French soldiers. (Applause.) I ask you, gentlemen, to pay our distinguished guest our tribute of regard for him with an expression of our gratitude for what his nation has done and is doing, and of our admiration for all they have endured, and an expression also of our determination to be with them to the end, when we shall be victorious." (Applause.)

"We specially honour France," said Archbishop Wright, in supporting the toast, "because she is great enough to suffer. We see her stern, unbending soul; we think of her gallant legions, who do not count life anything if only they can hold the foe back. France had given us the password—'They shall not pass.' A union of hearts, we are facing the worst to-day. Equally together we shall, helped by God's mercy, build up a better world to-morrow." (Applause.)

Mr. D. Levy, M.L.A., who also supported the toast, spoke of what M. Chayet had done to make the French language, the French nation, and the French character and spirit better known to the people of this State; and of his patriotic services along different channels.

Brigadier-General Antill, speaking of his acquaintance with the French people, said he had never, while at the front, seen a Frenchman of fighting age who was not fighting. (Applause.) It was a reproach to come back here and find things so different. Civilian work in France was done by very old men, assisted by boys and women. He had seen French women, too, doing the hardest work under shell fire, and he had never seen them turn their backs. (Applause.)

"God knows," he added, "where France is still finding men. One wonders, after all these years, after her tremendous struggle, where her fighting material is still coming from. I come back here—to a country of which I have been very, very proud—and feel ashamed. At almost every turn in the streets of the large cities one can pick on men who are fit to fight. Why won't they go? They say it is time enough when the enemy is at our gates. But Australia will never be defended here. If the time comes for us to fight here within our own gates we are done."

Brigadier-General Antill went on to say that there was the same patriotic spirit in England as in France, and evidence on all hands of women, even in the highest stations in life, doing—and proud to do it—the most menial and the hardest of work. There were no class distinctions; no petty fights. All were inspired with the one aim—to carry on. And in this they were worthily led by the Queen. (Applause.) In the Rouen Hospital a handsome girl came in, with a great bucket, a bar of soap, and a scrubbing brush. She got down to scrub his floor. She asked him if he knew her cousin, who was in Australia. He added that he had just gone to India. It was the Viceroy. She had been working in the hospital for two years. Her wages amounted to 4s 6d per week, and she got two days' leave. He happened, on another occasion, to be lunching at one of the largest clubs in London. Among the party was a woman, who, after "a very scratch lunch," said she must be off. She worked in a kitchen in one of the hospitals. That woman was a Russian princess—a great-grand-daughter of the Russian General who burnt Moscow when Napoleon tried to get it. That woman was working as a "slushy." Incidents such as this typified the spirit in France and England to-day.

"I am satisfied," he proceeded, "that the same spirit would be manifest here if it was only organised—the women would do it, and only the eligible men would get out of them."

M. CHAYET'S RESPONSE.

M. Chayet, who was warmly received upon rising to respond, said that German propaganda was responsible for France not being properly known before the war. He paid a special tribute of thanks to Captain Carmichael, who when Minister for Education facilitated his work in trying to spread a knowledge of the French language, and to the ex-Minister's recognition of the fact that the teaching of French would help Australia in entering the community of great nations. He spoke also of Australia's generosity to France, and of private letters received by him from France acknowledging it. It was with regret that he was leaving a State in which he had established so many pleasant associations. His work had been strenuous—for four years he had never been to bed before midnight—and his first feeling, therefore, was one of relief because he hoped to be able to enjoy a rest he needed. He was confident as to the result of the present struggle; the French would never abandon the fight even if Paris were taken. (Applause.) He also expressed his admiration for the original Anzacs who were present for having given a splendid example to the people. (Applause.)

BATTLE EXTENDED

FRENCH WITHDRAWAL EAST OF THE OISE

LONDON, June 13.

The Germans, while continuing their pressure on the Montdidier-Noyon battle-front, have attacked south-west of Soissons.

Desperate fighting in this sector so far has resulted in slight German progress.

Between Soissons and Noyon the French have effected a withdrawal from a salient which had been rendered dangerous by the German advance west of the Oise.

The enemy succeeded in crossing the Matz, which runs into the Oise below Ribecourt.

Enemy attempts to recapture the ground won by the French in Tuesday's counter-attack failed, and the French have taken 400 more prisoners in the region of Belloy and St. Maur.

THE OFFICIAL STATEMENTS.

A French communique issued on Wednesday afternoon stated: Between Montdidier and the Oise the battle has continued without any great change.

Yesterday afternoon and night on our left all the enemy's attempts to counter-attack were shattered.

We made further progress east of Mery and Senlis Wood.

The Germans, by violent attacks, also attempted to drive us back on the Aronde. On the front between St. Maur, Des Loges Farm, and Antheuil, we bore the shock, and inflicted very heavy losses on the attackers. We also maintained our positions.

On our right the Germans, despite repeated efforts, were unamble to debouch on the southern bank of the Matz. We hold the southern part of Chevrincourt and the station of Staurmatz.

According to the latest information our counter-attack yesterday forestalled a powerful enemy attack, which was in course of preparation on the same front. We encountered great forces which we overran. The prisoners taken by one of our divisions belonged to four different enemy divisions.

South of the Aisne the Germans this morning attacked between the river and the forest of Villers Cotterets, desperate fighting occurring on the front from Dommiers through Cutry, to south of Ambleny.

A French communique late on Wednesday night stated: Between Montdidier and the Oise the enemy renewed his pressure. All his attempts on our left to recapture our gains of yesterday failed. We progressed in the region of Belloy Wood and St. Maur, taking 400 more prisoners, several guns, and numerous machine guns. There has been no change on the St. Maur-Antheuil front.

The Germans on our right renewed their attacks along the Matz River, and after several costly attempts, gained a footing on the southern bank, also the village of Mericoco, and the heights of Ricard Cross.

Our troops east of the Oise on Monday night effected a withdrawal on a line from Bailly and Tracy-le-Val, to west of Nampcel, protected by covering detachments, which masked the movement.

We repulsed an enemy attack in the region of Hautebraye, and took prisoners.

South of the Aisne there were desperate combats, sometimes hand-to-hand, between the river and Villers Cotterets Forest. We stoutly resisted the attacks of the enemy, who progressed slightly on the plateau west of the villages of Dommiers and Cutry. His efforts against Ambleny and St. Pierre-Aigle failed.

North of the Marne we captured Montecourt les Bouquedaux, north of Eloup, and the southern part of Bussiares.

GERMAN REPORT.

(Admiralty—per Wireless Press.)

A German official report states: We repulsed, with the heaviest losses, a French counter-attack south-westward of Noyon. We threw back the enemy on the whole front, from Le Ployron to Antheuil. We cleared out the enemy from the west bank of the Oise, northward of the river's junction with the Matz.

Our prisoners now number 13,000.

The enemy evacuated Carlepont Wood. Pursuing him, we reached a line running northward of Bailly through Tracy-le-Val to westward of Nampcel.

There was hard fighting on Tuesday, when General von Hutier repulsed an expected counter-attack for the recapture of the group of hills south-westward of Noyon carried out in strength by several French divisions. Armoured cars were brought in, and great numbers are lying shot to pieces on the battlefield. Our counter-attack shattered the enemy's assault between Mery and Belloy. There was bitter fighting until nightfall.

We are pursuing the enemy beyond Carlepont and Caisnes.

The enemy, regardless of sacrifices, kept up his attacks north-westward of Chateau Thierry. They broke down with sanguinary losses.

BRITISH FRONT.

On Wednesday night Sir Douglas Haig reported: The French successfully raided on Tuesday night in the neighbourhood of Locre. There is nothing special to report on the British front.

ADVANCE CREATED AWKWARD SALIENT.

A review of the situation cabled on Wednesday evening stated: The most serious aspect of Hutier's attack is the gain of territory west of the Oise, from which the French had to retire to Ribecourt, as the river was behind them and was not bridged. The withdrawal created a deep French salient on the left bank of the Oise, from Ribecourt to Sempigny. The salient was only four miles wide at the narrowest point so a re-adjustment of the French line may be essential.

Hutier's plan included the capture of Compiegne on Sunday evening by General Schoeler's cavalry, which still has six miles to go.

BATTLE WITHOUT PAUSE.

Mr G. H. Perris on Tuesday evening telegraphed: The battle continues without pause. The completion of the enemy manoeuvre in the direction of Thiescourt and Ribecourt permits a halt enabling him to bring up guns and make good his losses. The problem of transport and supply is difficult in such a region. The Germans are hurriedly embodying men in combatant units, particularly the artillery, who hitherto have been regarded as fit only for auxiliary services. This indicates anxiety regarding the available effectives. It is well-known the army's food situation is not good.

A later message states that the evacuation of the Dreslincourt-Ribecourt angle was carried out early this morning. This region comprises deep valleys and thickly-wooded hills, being most favourable ground for infiltration tactics. The defenders, with the Oise at their back, would have risked useless loss of life and material by continuing to hold out. The line of the Matz River, five miles beyond the German departure point, now marks the front on this side. A new enemy drive last night with masses of fresh troops threw back the French along the Estrees-road as far as the Aronde Valley.

French reserves, however, were ready to intervene. A fine counter-attack broke up the German ranks, and brought back the French to their former positions south of Belloy and Marqueglise. One of the chief incidents in this admirable recoil was the charge of the black troops, who were supported by tanks.

The strength of the French resistance on this flank greatly limits the value of such success as the enemy has obtained. The artillery forces are approximately equal, and our aviation strength is definitely superior.

A Paris message states it is too early to estimate the results of the successful French counter-attack, but it is significant that a German communique states that the intended results of the battle have been gained.

TO HASTEN THE CLIMAX.

Mr. Grasty, telegraphing to the "New York Times" from Paris, says the enemy is determined at whatever cost to hasten the climax of the battle. This is proved by the Crown Prince borrowing four divisions from Prince Rupprecht.

Paris believes that General Foch will be able to hold his line for four months, when there will be 1,250,000 Americans in France.

THE AUSTRALIANS.

LOCAL ADVANCES.

(OFFICIAL COMMONWEALTH CORRESPONDENT.)

The Australians are steadily working at the German lines on the Somme and Ancre like ants. They have eaten their way forward now over two miles since they first started this process. Yesterday the infantry on the Somme itself pushed out their posts without meeting opposition to the further edge of the village of Bouzincourt, which is now not asking for the assistance of artillery. Our losses for the ground and material gained are most satisfactory.

In an enterprise contemporaneously further on the left, between Ville sur Ancre and Morlancourt, a party of Victorians went out and raided a German position by a surprise attack. They killed thirty and took six prisoners, also two machine guns. Our men did not sustain a scratch.

Two regiments of the Saxon 24th Division were likewise severely handled and a reserve battalion. One of these apparently endeavoured to counter-attack at six o'clock in the morning, but melted away before the new Australian line. Two other counter-attacks in the Morlancourt direction were wiped out. A regiment belonging to a division opposite Villers Bretonneux, which was recently brought up, was also cut to pieces last night. The number of Germans killed was very heavy, and the total captured about 300, also 20 machine-guns and several minenwerfer. The prisoners belong to three divisions, some to the unfortunate 54th Division. Last night the Australians between Morlancourt and Sailly-Laurette made another advance on the top of a ridge in a set battle. Over a front of 3000 yards they took a German trench position which was heavily wired, and penetrated 600 yards.

AIDING THE ENEMY.

EX-LORD MAYOR CHARGED.

Sir Joseph Jonas, ex-Lord Mayor of Sheffield, appeared before the Bow-street Police Court on a charge of communicating information useful to the enemy between 1913 and June, 1918.

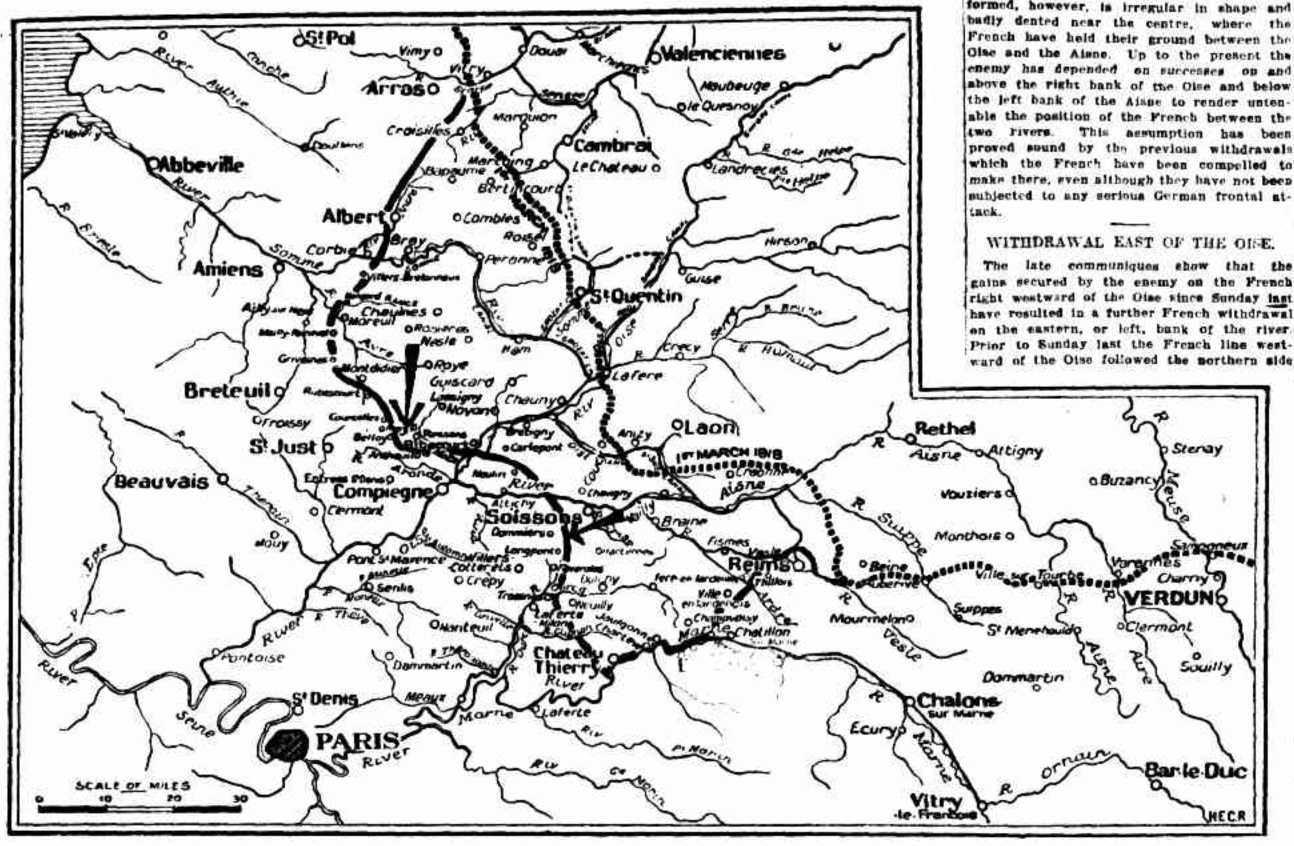
Bail was allowed in the sum of £2000.

Sir Joseph Jonas was born in Bingen, on the Rhine, in 1845. He was educated at Bingen and Cologne, and later he took up business as a steel manufacturer, and was chairman of several English companies. He was knighted in 1905. He was Lord Mayor of Sheffield in the same year.

NATURALISED GERMANS.

As the outcome of the recent agitation the Prime Minister will be asked to appoint a select committee to consider the question of enemy aliens, who are naturalised British subjects.

THE THREAT TO PARIS.



The above map shows the development of the big salient in the German line in the region north-eastward of Paris. The dotted line represents the front prior to the commencement of the enemy's 1918 offensive. The heavy black line indicates the present position of the front as suggested by recent cablegrams. The black arrows show the direction of the enemy's most recent attacks, which are intended to flatten out the Allied salient between Montdidier and Chateau Thierry, and bring the front of the German salient nearer to Paris.

The heavy black line opposite the lower arrow should be a little farther westward, giving the enemy the villages of Dommiers and Longpont.

GERMAN FLEET.

NAVAL OFFENSIVE POSSIBLE.

LONDON, June 12.

The Washington correspondent of the "New York Times" says that advices from Switzerland state that the German Admiralty is considering a great naval offensive, and it is believed that orders have been given to place the German Fleet in readiness for action.

AIRMEN HARRY FOE.

Sir Douglas Haig reports: Our aeroplanes assisted the French counter-attack on the Western portion of the Noyon battle front on Tuesday by special patrols dealing with German machines, and by vigorous and constant bombing of the enemy's trenches, gun positions, and communications. There was heavy machine-gun fire from low flying 'planes upon hostile troops and transport in the same area. We destroyed ten German aeroplanes and drove down four uncontrollable. The British lost three. Two British which were missing the previous day returned.

Anglo-French squadrons since the German attack in the Noyon sector on June 9 have dropped 21 tons of bombs and accounted for 29 enemy machines.

On the British front two German machines were shot down and two driven down uncontrollable. One British aeroplane is missing. We dropped fourteen tons of bombs on Tuesday. Our night-flyers heavily attacked the railway at Cambrai and billets at Fremicourt, dropping four tons without loss.

A French communique states: Aeroplanes on Tuesday participated in our counter-attack on the front from Montdidier to St Maur, bombing and dispersing enemy divisions coming up to meet the shock. Convoys were stopped. Heavy batteries were deserted by the gunners, who had ceased fire. Altogether 26 tons of projectiles were dropped, in addition to 13 tons at night time on enemy stations. Thirteen enemy machines were felled on Tuesday.

Mr. Percival Phillips telegraphs: British airmen have been active in the French zone, between Montdidier and Noyon, machine-gunning infantry and bombing concentration depots and camps. On Sunday night the British dropped over 800 bombs around Roye and fired 30,000 rounds.

Two of our aviators had a remarkable escape. After being brought down by anti-aircraft guns behind the German lines, they had many exciting adventures in the enemy front trenches and No Man's Land. The observer was stunned by the fall, but the pilot revived him. Both walked towards the French lines. They stumbled on a German heavy battery in action, and the aviators were forced to lie under a hedge all day. Eventually they swam a river and reached a French post, after hair-breadth escapes among German sentries, who frequently challenged them and fired.

On another occasion a German decoy machine signalled the approach of a British patrol. Six German albatrosses swooped to attack, and simultaneously another six albatrosses appeared, confusing the first batch, who thought they were British. A general dog-fight ensued, in which the British neatly brought down the German decoy, also two albatrosses. They then withdrew, leaving the remaining albatrosses fighting among themselves.

ALLIED SUPERIORITY.

English newspapers draw attention to the fact that the Germans are no longer reporting their air losses. This clearly is the result of the Allied superiority. One British squadron downed 105 enemies in six weeks, of which 22 were destroyed in one way or another. Another squadron downed 50 in a month.

THE ITALIANS.

AUSTRIAN DREADNOUGHTS SUNK.

The Rome correspondent of the United Press says it is officially announced that two Italian torpedo boats sank two Austrian Dreadnoughts off the Dalmatian Islands on Monday.

A British-Italian communique on Tuesday stated: Yorkshire troops made a successful raid, capturing 11 prisoners and inflicting considerable casualties.

Our air force has destroyed 21 enemy aeroplanes since last report. Four of our machines failed to return.

WOMEN'S WAR WORK.

The "Pall Mall Gazette" interviewed Mrs. Hughes, who said: "A message of whole-hearted encouragement, touched with the slightest note of envy, is what I bring to the English women from their cousins overseas. Australian girls and women yearn for an opportunity to display the same self-sacrifice as the English. Thousands would come, if they could get passports, to work in England and France. Englishwomen are such earnest war-workers that the milliners and dressmakers complain that they have nothing to do."

A GERMAN PEACE.

BRITAIN'S NAVAL BASES.

SHOULD BE ABANDONED.

LONDON, June 12.

An Amsterdam message says the Berlin "Kreuz Zeitung," developing the peace offensive, proposes that Britain should abandon her naval bases at Gibraltar, Aden, Singapore, and elsewhere, and should reduce her fleet to a sea police, in exchange for Germany promising not to create bases on the Belgian coast.

Germany's colonies must be restored, and guarantees must be given for the future development of Germany's world political position against British obstruction.

The paper says: "The war cannot be ended by a settlement of territorial difficulties, but if England assures the freedom of the seas by reducing her navy, dismantling Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, and Singapore, placing under international control these harbours, Germany would not need the Flanders coast, and would surrender Belgium."

APPEAL TO LABOUR.

FACING CRUCIAL MONTHS.

President Wilson sent a message to the American Federation of Labour thanking the workers for their co-operation, and adding: "Ill-considered and unjustified interruptions of essential labour at this stage will make it impossible for us to win the war. We are facing the crucial months of the struggle, when Labour's undivided effort is indispensable."

TO FOIL GERMANY.

BRITAIN AND JAPAN IN AGREEMENT.

Mr. A. J. Balfour (Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs), speaking at a luncheon held in honor of the Japanese mission, said that Britain and Japan had no differences of opinion in regard to the aim of the present war. He was sure that if the exigencies of the conflict required us to call upon our Allies to make new and fresh efforts, Japan would live, as she always had done, up to her full obligations. (Cheers.)

Mr. Balfour went on to criticise German trading methods, and pointed out that these were part of her policy of world domination. Germany was trying to use her manufacturing power practically to enslave all the rest of the world. This problem would have to be solved, and he hoped Japan would assist in foiling this policy of political and economic penetration.

U-BOAT CAMPAIGN.

NEW YORK, June 12.

German submarines have sunk two Norwegian steamships off the United States coast. The total number of vessels sunk to date is 18.

A U-boat looted and sank the steamer Vindeggen in American waters on Monday. It also sank the steamer Hendrik Lund.

There are many unofficial reports of the exploits of U-boats. These have not been confirmed by the Navy Department. Two steamers report that they were attacked by U-boats off the Virginia coast on Sunday. The passengers of a Brazilian vessel report they heard firing off the coast on Tuesday morning.

The Washington correspondent of the United Press says it is practically certain that a chaser sank a U-boat on June 8, off the coast of Virginia. The chaser suddenly encountered a submarine, the periscope of which was showing. The vessels circled each other several minutes at a distance of 100 yards, when the chaser made a dash over the U-boat and dropped a depth bomb. The periscope disappeared, and oil rose to the surface. The explosion lifted up the chaser. It is reported that three German sailors' caps were found in the vicinity.

DUTCH TRAWLER SUNK.

An Amsterdam message states: The Dutch trawler Helena was torpedoed off the Dogger Bank, three of the crew being killed.

MILITARY SERVICE TREATY.

The State Department in Washington has announced that a British-American reciprocal military service treaty has been signed, subject to ratification by the Senate.

It is not announced how it will affect Irishmen in the United States.

THE MADSEN GUN.

The Liberal War Committee waited as a deputation on the Premier to urge that steps should be taken without delay to secure the control, manufacture, and supply of Madsen guns.

RUSSIAN TURMOIL.

FIGHTING IN SIBERIA.

LONDON, June 12.

Delayed Russian messages indicate that fierce fighting is in progress in different parts of Siberia and European Russia, between the Czecho-Slovaks and Bolsheviks. The former, although prisoners of war, are bitterly hostile to the Central Powers, but it is impossible to gauge the full significance of the encounters.

German-Magyar prisoners assisted the Bolsheviks in the fighting at Pensa, on the Moscow-Siberia Railway, 220 miles westward of Samara, which another Czech force is threatening. The Czechs captured Pensa, and subsequently gave up their prisoners except the Germans and Magyars, whom they intend to shoot.

It is reported that a force of 15,000 Czecho-Slovaks cut the railway line in the southern Urals. Similar insurrections are occurring in many Siberian towns between rival [illegible] of released prisoners.

Reports from Tokio state that the Trans-Siberian cable has broken down west and also east of Irkutsk.

A mass meeting of Bolsheviks, which was held in Madison Square Garden, New York, passed a resolution urging the United States to recognise the Soviet Government.

Washington correspondents state that the Government is not convinced as to the desirability of intervening in Russia.

CHAOS IN PETROGRAD.

The "Morning Post's" Stockholm correspondent reports that Petrograd is in a state of turmoil. The Soviet is only supported by a dwindling number of Lettish soldiers. The population is dying of hunger, while small pox and typhus are raging.

TRIAL OF THE EX-CZAR.

The Petrograd correspondent of the "Daily Express" says the forthcoming indictment, in connection with the trial of the ex-Czar, promises to be of a sensational character. The Moscow Soviet is collecting telegrams and letters sent to European monarchs, including the kings of Italy, Bulgaria, Greece, Belgium, and Germany, also to the monk Rasputin, and M. Poincare.

The most remarkable item in the indictment alleges that the ex-Czar had a secret understanding with the German Emperor, amounting to a verbal alliance against France and England, Nicholas promising not to hamper the German military mission to Turkey.

Telegrams from Zurich states that the "Frankfurter Zeitung" admits that the internal situation in the Ukraine is difficult, and the Government is disliked by all classes. Every village is under military control for the purpose of confiscating the corn. The country is without coal. There are 160,000 unemployed in Odessa, Kieff, Ekaterinoslav, and other towns.

SOUTH AFRICAN UNREST.

LABOUR TROUBLES ON RAND.

A message from Capetown says a certain amount of unrest is reported in country districts in the Transvaal. Some of the Nationalist leaders complain that their names are being used by irresponsible people to stir up mischief.

In connection with the unrest on the Rand, the "Volkstem," the Government organ in Pretoria, utters a warning that if disturbances break out the Boers are quite willing to play the same part as in January, 1914, realising that their own interests are bound up in the maintenance of the gold output and the keeping of order on the Rand.

In reference to a suggestion in the English Press that the mines should receive a higher price for gold, mining authorities on the Rand state that there can be no possible increase in the price of gold. The suggestion is made in the interests of the Imperial Government that a bonus or subsidy given for gold production should apply to all parts of the Empire.

TROUBLED AUSTRIA.

The State Department in Washington has received reports that the Slavic agitation in Austria is growing alarmingly. Placards announce that the Government will suppress the uprising with all its force and without pity.

Advices from Rome state that executions for treason and mutiny among the Austrian marines at Pola are of daily occurrence. Forty were shot in one day recently.

ESCAPED PRISONERS CAUGHT.

Four German officers, accompanied by their servants, escaped from the Stratford internment camp after digging a thirty-foot tunnel. They were recaptured at Walton Naze. They had walked 70 miles, hoping to escape by boat to the Belgian coast.

An Amsterdam message states that it is understood Holland will undertake an expert examination of the sunken Koningin Regentes in order to ascertain the cause of the loss of the vessel.

WAR NOTES.

ENEMY EFFORT BELOW THE AISNE.

It is not surprising that the enemy should have followed up his offensive along the Noyon-Montdidier front with a renewed assault from the right of that portion of his line affected by his advance towards the Marne on May 27 last. The capture of the high ground south-westward of Noyon, which he achieved as the result of attacks delivered since Sunday last, has enabled him to dominate portion of the French line on the eastern side of the river. It has thus increased the pressure on the left of the salient formed in the Allied line as the result of the German drive towards Amiens in March last, and his advance to the Marne at the end of May. The attack between the Aisne and the Forest of Villers Cotterets, which is reported this morning, is intended to exert pressure on the right of that salient. Coming as it has while the Noyon-Montdidier move is still in progress, it suggests that the Germans have decided to make simultaneous attacks on both wings of this Allied salient, in the hope of rendering it untenable, and thus uniting their Marne and Somme drive into one big threatening salient north-eastward of Paris, with its base extending from Arras in the north to Reims in the south. He has, in fact, partly succeeded in doing this already, as he has practically rendered mobile the whole of the original Allied defensive front between the two cities mentioned. The salient thus formed, however, is irregular in shape and badly dented near the centre, where the French have held their ground between the Oise and the Aisne. Up to the present the enemy has depended on successes on and above the right bank of the Oise and below the left bank of the Aisne to render untenable the position of the French between the two rivers. This assumption has been proved sound by the previous withdrawals which the French have been compelled to make there, even although they have not been subjected to any serious German frontal attack.

WITHDRAWAL EAST OF THE OISE.

The late communiques show that the gains secured by the enemy on the French right westward of the Oise since Sunday last have resulted in a further French withdrawal on the eastern, or left, bank of the river. Prior to Sunday last the French line westward of the Oise followed the northern side of the high ground between the upper reaches of the Matz River and the Oise. It crossed the latter river immediately southward of Noyon and some distance higher up the stream than the village of Sempigny, at which point the enemy had previously made several attempts to cross in order to nip off a minor salient. On the eastern side of the Oise the line covered the northern and north-eastern outskirts of Carlepont Wood, and then fell away to the south-eastward, crossing the Aisne between the villages of le Port and Fontenoy. When the Germans turned the French right on the plateau between the Upper Matz and the Oise, and forced it back to the southern slopes of that high ground, they created a loop in the French line, running up along the Oise from the mouth of the Matz, and bending round the northern and north-eastern fringe of the Carlepont Wood. This loop has been straightened out by the withdrawal to a line running between Bailly, Tracy le Val, and Nampcel. The position of this line between Bailly and Tracy le Val is almost identical with the old front prior to the Allies' Somme offensive and the German withdrawal early last year. Nampcel is still behind what was then the German front line. The withdrawal has necessitated the evacuation of the useful Carlepont Wood and Ourscamp Forest, but the Allies on this eastern side of the river still have the important Laigue Forest between their present front and the northern outskirts of the Compiegne Forest.

THE CROSSING OF THE MATZ.

While this withdrawal has strengthened the Allied line astride the Oise, the improvement will only hold good if the French on the western side of the river are able to avoid giving ground again to any great extent. Any further advance which the enemy makes beyond the line of the lower Matz will tend to create a new salient in the French line eastward of the Oise, and compel a further withdrawal on this western side of the larger Allied salient between Montdidier and Chateau Thierry. In this connection it is not pleasant to read in the late French communique that the enemy has forced the line of the Matz, and obtained a footing in the village of Melicocq, and on the heights near la Croix-Ricard on the southern side of the stream. Whether he will be able to develop this gain or not remains to be seen, but the possession of the high ground to the northward of the Matz will no doubt give him an important advantage in future fighting on this sector. Farther westward on this Noyon-Montdidier front the French counter-attacks appear to have had the effect of stopping the enemy's advance near the centre and of gaining further ground near Belloy and St. Maur. They may retard the enemy's progress beyond the Matz, but they would have to make very pronounced gains before they could threaten to restore the whole position on the French right. With regard to the pressure on the eastern side of the Allied salient, between Montdidier and Chateau Thierry, we have received but little information. The French communique states that the struggle on this sector southward of the Aisne has been very severe, and that the enemy progressed slightly westward of Dommiers and Cutry, which villages are therefore both in his possession. Up to the present, however, no serious situation appears to have arisen on this front as the result of his attacks, though we may be sure that he will renew his efforts to create one.

LATE WAR NEWS.

WESTERN FRONT.

ENEMY REPULSED

BY FRENCH AND AMERICANS.

LONDON, June 13.

The French hurled the enemy back north of the Matz River. The Americans broke up a violent German assault at Belleau.

DRIVE TOWARDS PARIS.

The new German offensive south of the Aisne between Soissons and the Marne is believed to be a renewal of the direct drive towards Paris.

GERMAN RUSH STOPPED.

FRENCH EXPERTS OPTIMISTIC.

Since General Foch's afternoon communique Paris experts are optimistic that the German "bullrush" has been stopped. It is estimated that 210 German divisions have been engaged since March 21. Each division lost a minimum of 2000 men each time it entered the line. It is noteworthy that the Germans show no elation. The Americans captured 34 German officers. They state that the High Command promised peace by July 1. The German officers now realise that this is impossible, and criticise the utter recklessness of the present offensive, which entails the most terrible losses. They say that disease in Germany is rampant. Children under 10 years of age are dying wholesale. An air raid destroyed Cologne station, and 120 soldiers who were returning from leave were killed.

PRISONER OF WAR.

RETURNED SOLDIER'S STORY.

When approached at the Anzac Buffet yesterday, Private A. T. Lord, of Petersham, a returned soldier who had been a prisoner of war, did not seem inclined to talk. Suddenly throwing off his reserve the man who had been in the hands of the Germans nearly a year told his story in a simple manner.

"I left Sydney in 1916," said Private Lord, "and I was taken prisoner in April last year. I was released early this year. I don't want to talk about myself; but I must tell you how I was looked after by the Red Cross Society—I mean your Red Cross Society. The Australian boys who were with me in Germany, and who are still prisoners of war, would never forgive me if they found out that I had kept my lips closed about the Red Cross on reaching Sydney. I feel it my duty to do all I can to get the Australian public to realise that our prisoners of war in Germany have only one chance of keeping body and soul together. I tell you, and I want you to believe me, that without a liberal supply of food and clothes, parcels sent through the Australian Red Cross Society, our poor fellows in the German prison camps and so-called German hospitals, would die of cold and hunger. Don't think I'm piling on the agony. I'm not. I'm telling the truth—nothing but the truth. How many Australian prisoners of war there are in Germany now I cannot say, but I can speak with personal knowledge of between 2000 and 3000. About 200 Australians shared my fate while I was held by the enemy for nine long months. We were all shockingly treated. At least 20 of my comrades died for want of proper treatment, and a few, five or six, I should say, were starved to death.

"I went over the top at Bullecourt with my mates in April, 1917," Private Lord went on to say. "A bomb found me. My left hand was almost blown off, and I lost the sight of one eye. I was captured with other Australians and taken to the Mons German Field Hospital, and kept there two weeks. Then I was taken to Soltau, in Hanover. I am putting it mildly when I say that the rations were totally inadequate. As a matter of fact, most of the food was unfit for human consumption. We were allowed half a pound of bread daily. The only soup fit to drink was the black pea soup, which was served to us twice a week. The rest of our fare consisted of pickled cabbage, pickled turnips, pickled swedes, and pickled mangel-wurzels. The last dainty dish I have mentioned is generally regarded as pigs' food. Heaven only knows how we would have lasted if we had not received your Red Cross parcels. Those parcels saved our lives. On an average we received six parcels each every month. If the boys who are still prisoners ever reach their homes they will thank the Red Cross, as I do. You may say from me that every Red Cross parcel which reaches the Australian prisoners of war in Germany saves a life."

"I was at Mannheim," Private Lord, continued, "during one of the English and French air raids, and I can confirm the reports which stated that the raid was very effective. I saw the extensive damage at both ends of the Frankfort-on-Main railway station. Germans who spoke to me admitted that seven factories and other buildings were destroyed."

I.W.W. INFLUENCES.

TOWNSVILLE, Thursday.

There is much regret at the continued strike at Wolfram. At first the miners refused to accept Judge Macnaughton's award. Judge McCawley then held a conference of the parties at Cairns, and suggested an increase which he considered fair. The employers agreed, but the men refused. Since then the employers have practically conceded the men's demands, but a resolution to work was defeated by a small majority. This continued refusal is alleged to be largely due to I.W.W. and enemy influences to block the production of munition metals.

AUSTRALIAN REPRESENTATION.

PERTH, Thursday.

The State executive of the Labour Federation has resolved to write to the British Labour party, the Independent Labour party, the British Socialist party, and the "London Times" utterly repudiating Mr. Hughes and Mr. Cook as representing the organised workers of Western Australia. The secretary was also instructed to move a motion to this effect at the Labour Congress next week.

STATE PARLIAMENT.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

MR. STOREY AND MR. HOLMAN.

When formal business had been disposed of in the Legislative Assembly yesterday the leader of the Opposition, Mr. John Storey, resumed the debate on the Address in Reply to the Governor's speech. The Premier followed Mr. Storey, the speeches of both leaders being listened to by a comparatively full House. The galleries were also well occupied.

Mr. Dooley said there was a considerable amount of unemployment and slack times owing to the shortage of material, of which a great deal was locked up in warehouses. One enemy firm, he said, had held enormous stocks, which were only now being released, at a profit of many thousands of pounds. He asked if the Government could not do something to prevent this.

The Premier said he would have inquiries made to see whether it was a case in which the Government ought to take action.

Answering Mr. M'Garry, the Minister for Lands, Mr. Ashford, said it was not true, as stated by Mr. Storey, that the land legislation of the last twelve months had encouraged the aggregation of large estates. None of the safeguards against this had been removed or ignored. The right of conversion, recently enacted, did not encourage this in any way. The Minister added that after the decisions on land matters reached by the Labour conference the night before, Mr. Storey would probably change his mind on a number of matters. He would, for instance, now be in favour of optional tenures. (Laughter.)

Dr. Arthur said that in view of the increasing seriousness of the war situation and the falling-off in recruiting, the House should be adjourned at once to allow members to do some useful war work.

The Premier said there was nothing to prevent Dr. Arthur employing his time in any way he thought fit. He (the Premier) must disclaim any responsibility for Dr. Arthur's presence on the benches if he thought he should be somewhere else. (Laughter.)

Replying to several questions by members of the Opposition about the allocation of 15 acres of Wentworth Park for purposes of wool storage, the Minister for Lands said it was entirely a Federal matter. He had endeavoured to make the best possible bargain in the interests of the people of the locality. Had they held out against the taking of portion of the park it would have been taken under the War Precautions Act. In any case, the area taken had not been used for a long time for legitimate park purposes. Its main use appeared to have been for a two-up school. (Opposition dissent.) The terms on which the area had been granted were the payment of £250 per year rent, all of which would go for the better lighting and improvement of the park generally.

Mr. G. M'Girr said that the great majority of soldier settlers had turned out failures on the land, and the policy of preferment given to them was keeping a large number of bona fide settlers off the land.

Mr. Ashford said that was not true. The great majority of the returned soldiers settled on the land were turning out very successful. The principle of preference to returned soldiers had been deliberately entered upon, and as long as he remained in that position it would be carried out. (Hear, hear.) In every case where it was shown to be justifiable the local returned soldiers got the first choice.

Answering Mr. Osborne, the Chief Secretary, Mr. Fuller, said that five additional polling places in the Upper Hunter electorate had been applied for and supported by Mr. Abbott, the late member. Of these three had been refused. A total of 1057 objections to names on the roll had been lodged, of which only 144 had been disallowed. In the Scone district, only 14 out of 134 had been disallowed. The matter of prosecutions for frivolous objections was entirely in the hands of the electoral registrar.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

Mr. John Storey, in resuming the debate on the motion for the adoption of the Address in Reply, said there was not one on the Opposition side who did not join most heartily with Mr. Weaver when he said the world sang the praises of the Anzacs, and remembered with reverence those who had died in their country's service. All those men had won the unstinted praise of the world. Referring to the recruiting conference, he denied that there had been any bargaining on the part of the Labour party. They would not have put questions forward but for the fact that they were invited to do so. And they put them forward, not as a condition precedent to anything that they might do, but simply as a number of things which, they believed, had very materially impeded recruiting. Mr. Storey emphasised the obligation that was upon the Government, whose supporters had gone on the platform as win-the-war candidates.

This several Government supporters denied.

Mr. Storey thereupon asked them if they now denied that they were a win-the-war party. (Opposition laughter.) If there was any obligation upon Opposition members to go out and aid recruiting, what members on the Government side during the last twelve months had gone on the recruiting platform? What was there to prevent any man who conceived it to be his duty from asking to be put down as a recruiting speaker? No member, no matter what side of the House, could boast too much of what he had done in connection with recruiting. If speaking on the public platform meant that they were doing their duty to their country, then very few of them had done their duty. If the failure of recruiting was attributable to that, then they all stood condemned—all with the exception of the Speaker. He was the one man who had been doing anything. There had been mention of the Trades Hall, but the Trades and Labour Council was not an organisation that belonged exclusively to the Labour party. If it were so, he had no hesitation in saying that if he were the leader of his party two years hence he would be Premier of the country. There was a big percentage of trade unionists who were not supporters of the Labour party, and to make indiscriminate charges against those was to charge a big percentage of men who supported the National party. There were members of his party, and of the Government party, too, who held strong views about the war, but were members and trade unionists generally to be blamed because of the utterances of a few men?

On the question of re-registration of unions, Mr. Storey said he was in accord with the idea of re-registration, but could not see why there should be differentiation in the treatment of unions. If one union was guilty, all were equally guilty, and the object of the Government would fail if all the unions were not treated alike. Men belonging to deregistered unions found it impossible to get work. If those men who came to the assistance of the Government at the time of the great strike—many of whom were physically unfit—were to be kept in their positions to the detriment of the railway services, then efficiency must go down. For one thing, he believed that the workers could not do wrong; they might make mistakes, but when they went on strike to better their conditions, and those of their people, they were not doing wrong if the strike was the only method of getting what they wanted. They had never gone on strike except for a proper object.

They could not trace to the Government one single piece of legislation that might be regarded as of a remedial character, concluded the leader of the Opposition. Referring to the Government's shipbuilding programme, he ventured to assert that the first ship would not be turned out for two years. He was not arguing that they should not send more men to the front, but it was the obvious duty of the Government, before they launched out on a big scheme of shipbuilding, to ascertain whether they would have the thousands of men necessary for it if ships were to be built expeditiously.

THE PREMIER'S REPLY.

Mr. Holman spoke for a little over an hour in reply to the leader of the Opposition. Dealing almost exclusively with the war situation, he caustically twitted one member after another of the Opposition, who interjected freely, with their connection with the stop-the-war policy of outside organisations. For three-quarters of an hour the atmosphere was electric, and several members were cautioned by the Speaker for disorder. Cheers and counter-cheers punctuated the speech.

The Premier said Mr. Storey had asserted that the Government had done nothing to face after-war problems, and nothing to encourage industries, yet in almost the next breath he spoke of what Mr. Grahame, Minister for Agriculture, had done to encourage wheatgrowing; what Mr. Ball, Minister for Works, had done for shipbuilding; and wound up by saying that these things were all wrong. He spoke of Mr. Ashford's work for settling men on the land, and criticised that. Now Mr. Ashford had only in exceptional cases set returned soldiers on wheatgrowing lands. The majority of the men now going on the land were not able to stand the rough work incidental to wheatgrowing, and were being placed in other departments of landed industry, so that the majority of Mr. Storey's criticisms there were as wide of the mark as he was in other portions of his deliverance. He had shown irresponsibility in his utterances, and had made statements which were wrong, and which he should know were wrong. One of his statements was that the present occupants of the Treasury benches went to the country as a Win-the-War party. That was absolutely untrue. The adoption of that phrase as a party cry occurred during the Federal election, and was the subject of an immediate protest by the Recruiting Committee, of which Mr. Storey was a member.

This was two months later than the time when the State candidates were before the country, and in that case Mr. Storey's memory has misled him. At the recent by-election Mr. Storey said the Premier had charged the Labour party with disloyalty as a body. That he (Mr. Holman) denied. What he had said in the Upper Hunter was on record but Mr. Storey, when he had said a thing twice seemed to believe it must be true. A third statement in the speech was equally reckless. He stated that during the Upper Hunter campaign the Premier spent half-an-hour in attacking a gentleman named Judd. He had not mentioned Mr. Judd's name. The gentleman to whom he made reference was Mr. Boote, and speaking of him he mentioned that he was informed Mr. Boote at Brisbane delivered a lecture on the I.W.W. prisoners, that he had in that lecture made a series of statements that these men were wrongfully in gaol, that he had announced his intention to deliver a similar lecture in Melbourne, and that at the lecture in Brisbane canvassers were going round collecting money towards funds to have their case investigated. The canvassers carried placards, containing the inscription, "For the benefit of our comrades who are now languishing in gaol." His recollection of the mention of Mr. Judd's name was that it was used by Captain Toombs, the Labour candidate, when he mentioned in an interview after the election that he attributed his defeat to the fact that Mr. Rae, one of the leading lights in Mr. Storey's party, who was now on his way to the Federal Conference of the party, took the chair for Mr. Judd, and damned his chances by associating his name with that of Mr. Judd. The statement that he (Mr. Holman) had charged the trades-unionists with disloyalty was equally wrong, with the others he had mentioned.

Mr. Storey. I said your party did.

Mr. Holman: As a whole the party had not taken up that attitude, and had not expressed such a sentiment. Admittedly, the Government had not yet carried out the whole of its programme, but with the assistance of members they hoped to do much of it before the session closed. The power of fixing prices was in the hands of the Commonwealth. The Commonwealth had practically warned all the State Governments to abandon price-fixing themselves; they (the Commonwealth) had appointed State price-fixing commissioners, acting under Federal authority. The Government had called members together, not merely to discuss matters of domestic policy, but in order to take some steps to restore, if it were possible, wholly, or in part, at all events, the general harmony and co-operation of sections of the community that prevailed in the earlier months of the war.

An Opposition member: Why only in part?

The Premier: I hope in the whole, if not in part. They were, he added, asking members to enter upon a path which would lead to conciliation, and were prepared to ask the House to consent to the necessary legislation for the reregistration of a large number of the unions.

An Opposition member: Why not all of them?

The Premier: Let the bill be brought forward; we can then explain our reasons for not going quite as far as some would wish. The bill will be found to be in accord with the expectations that were raised by Mr. Beeby and myself at the Governor-General's Conference. They promised to do only certain limited things, and these limited promises would be fulfilled under the bill. It was, he added, a definite step to meet large bodies who had allowed their local and sectional grievances to eclipse in their minds the national peril which beset us to-day. The Government's proposal was an effort to reach these men. By removing some of their grievances they hoped again to set their minds free to be concentrated on the one big issue before us all.

FRIENDS OF THE ENEMY.

He believed the vast majority of the people of Australia had only one opinion on the war: but there were in our midst certain enemies of the Allies. There were men outside of that House who would, if they could, decide the issue in favour of Austria and Germany. There were men who called themselves Sinn Feiners and internationalists, who were actually the supporters of the claims of our enemies. The great majority of the workers of Australia were absolutely loyal to the cause of the Allies. A big majority of Irishmen and men of Irish descent were equally loyal, and the vast majority of them, under the guidance of wise leaders, here as in America, had no anxiety except to see the Allies' cause triumphant. But there were in both groups extremists who were the deliberate enemies of the Allies' cause, either because they had a special grudge against one of the Allied nations or because they had a special grudge against one of the Governments.

Rumours were rife in Sydney during the last 24 hours that a conference which sat with closed doors had carried a most important resolution on a subject filled with the greatest importance to the people of the Empire and the world to-day.

Mr. J. Storey: What may take place in a secret conference cannot surely be placed to our responsibility.

Mr. Holman said he had not saddled Mr. Storey with what had taken place in the secret conference. He had said that all Sydney was filled with rumours during the last 24 hours about what had taken place in the secret caucus, and the resolution that had been carried there. If it were true, into what position were we drifting in New South Wales, and was it not time that hon. members understood the duties of their position, and joined in demonstrating to the world that Australia was not a party to any treacherous resolution? (Cheers.) We were apparently confronted with the doctrine that the time had arrived for us to make peace, not to obtain victory, but to make peace by opening up negotiations with the enemy. He would ask how did the war begin, and why Great Britain entered into it? Was it not to help in driving the invader who had violated the soil of Belgium, and devastated it, that she took up arms? Yet there were those who told us to-day that we should make peace. Great Britain fought for the sake of the smaller nation which had been ruthlessly invaded.

Mr. G. M'Girr: That has been denied.

Mr. Holman: Do you deny it?

The Premier paused for fully a minute, standing facing Mr. M'Girr squarely, waiting for his reply.

Mr. M'Girr eventually said: I do deny it, and I can prove it by greater statesmen than you are.

Mr. Davies: Does not Lord Lansdowne deny it?

Mr. Holman: You are welcome to all the comfort you can get from the company of Lord Lansdowne. I can quite imagine the pacificist miners' secretary and the pacificist aristocrat of England walking down the street together in Sydney. It would be a sight worth seeing. (Laughter and uproar.) There was being disseminated in our midst to-day a most dangerous doctrine—that the war could be terminated, and that we could have peace by asking for it. Could Belgium have obtained it by negotiation? It would have been a peace that would involve the opening of her gates and territories to the Germans for them to pass through, and stab a friendly nation through the heart. The Belgian Government refused to accept peace by negotiation, and accepted war. Great Britain could have had peace at the price of tearing up her treaty with Belgium, and turning her back upon her Allies, and allowing the enemy to work his will upon the smaller peoples of Europe. If hon. members had read the report of Lord Bryce's Commission they would find there enough evidence to dispose of the cry of obtaining peace by negotiation. That report was such that one would hesitate to refer to it in a public meeting—the ravishing of women which took place in the wake of the German armies: the destruction of towns, and the other horrors and atrocities that had been committed. What was the position of the trades-unionists in Belgium to-day? Had they obtained such rights from the Germans that the trades-unionists of Australia should like to shake hands with them? Those who talked like this could only be scorned by honest trades-unionists, who were in the main loyal. There were certain people who were absolutely hostile to the Allied cause, but they were only a few. Misleading and sophistical doctrines were being circulated to-day that would lead people to believe that peace could be secured by negotiation; but the vast majority of the loyal people of Australia to-day felt indignation about the untold wrongs inflicted upon the poor downtrodden workers of the invaded territories who could not escape from the invader.

He would ask the House to carry the Reregistration Bill, to hold out the olive branch to men who had been brought into something like disaffection by the constant contemplation of their sectional differences, and the Government wanted to remove the cause of disaffection. After that he was going to ask the House to make a further appeal to the people to maintain the rapidly dwindling strength of our battalions. He asked the House to help secure a larger measure of unanimity, to help make our distracted fellow citizens more united than they had been during the last two years, to usher in greater harmony; to do something worthy of democracy, and secure a victory which would make the world safe for all democracies. (Cheers.)

Mr. M'Garry secured the adjournment of the debate, and the House rose until Tuesday next.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

In the Legislative Council, Dr. Nash resumed the debate on the Address-in-Reply, and referring to the war asked what were we doing to-day but talk. There was inefficiency in every direction that one could look.

The debate was continued by Mr. Brooks and Mr. Waddell, and concluded at 7 p.m., when the motion was carried. The House then adjourned until Wednesday next.

FROM THE FRONT.

RETURNED SOLDIERS WELCOMED.

NEW "STRONG POSTS" IN THE STREETS.

Save that the cheering was hampered by limits at some points on the route from the Central railway station to the Anzac Buffet, in the Domain, the returned soldiers who reached Sydney yesterday had a reception in keeping with their services to King and country. Of the back-from-the-war men 330 were representatives of New South Wales, and 160 were Queenslanders. The medical examinations on the two trains from Melbourne were completed by Captain Veech and Warrant-officer Knight, of the Military Hospital, Randwick, long before the men in khaki started to look out of the windows at the suburban flag displays in honour of their homecoming. What may be called the official reception party at the Central Railway Station included the State Commandant, Brigadier-General Lee, and the chairman and members of the Red Cross Society executive. The band of the 1st Infantry played as the Annandale Red Cross Voluntary Aid Detachments distributed sprigs of wattle, buttonhole flowers, and cigarettes. As there was a special train in waiting to take them to Brisbane, the Queenslanders did not leave the station. Morning tea was provided for them by the Stanmore V.A.D.

Headed by the band in a motor 'bus, the New South Wales men received their preliminary baptism of confetti before they had proceeded half the length of Eddy-avenue towards the heart of the city. The shrill shouts of schoolboys prepared them for the cheering of the members of the Returned Soldiers and Sailors' Imperial League of Australia, who had formed a "strong post" in the avenue. The "little offering" of the league took the form of 400 cigars, each with a "welcome" band on it. There was much enthusiasm when the procession reached the flag-decorated Town Hall, with its overhead signs, "The Empire Calls" and "Enlist Now." While the No. 2 District Guard Band played on the steps of the municipal building, the Auburn "strong post" just outside the gates made a brave show with banners and miniature flags. "Well done, boys, Auburn is proud of you," could be seen on one of the banners; on another "If you are from Auburn, sonny, say Hello!" The returned men had good reason to wave their hats as the band played "Australia will be there."

Outside the main entrance to the Queen Victoria Markets Mrs. M'Kenzie, Mayoress of Balmain, was stationed with her Girls' Brigade. This was the Balmain and Rozelle "strong post," and the gifts distributed included fruit, flowers, and cigarettes. A little lower down, on the opposite side of George-street, the Soldiers' Club made up in cordial greetings what was wanting in flag or floral display. A surprise awaited the returned men at the English, Scottish, and Australian Bank, corner of George and King streets. There the Newington College boys cheered as only schoolboys can. A few feet away from the collegians Mrs. Allan Beach and other Mosman enthusiasts had a decorated motor lorry, with the sign "We thank you for what you've done for us." In Martin-place and Moore-street the cheering reached the point of enthusiasm in excelsis. It was a reception worth fighting for.

The Police Band, ever-faithful on these occasions, played the returned men into Martin-place, and played as if it was a pleasure to play. Telephone girls, girls in khaki dresses, and girls with packets of confetti joined in the roaring welcome, which was caught up by the other crowd in Moore-street. Men who had "seen service" stood on the recruiting platform to cheer. A new "strong post" in Moore-street, between the Commonwealth Bank and the New South Wales Government Savings Bank, was furnished by 100 boys and 100 girls, under Mr. Hertiby, headmaster of the Glebe Public School. The Gallipoli Band occupied the Moore-street platform. As the procession turned into Castlereagh-street it was noticed that other offices and buildings had followed the flag-display of the Mutual Life and Citizens' Assurance Company. Instead of entering the Domain by the Governor Bourke gates in Macquarie-street, the procession yesterday came through Macquarie-street to the St. Mary's Cathedral gates. This change gave the staff of the Registrar-General's office a chance to "demonstrate." The men of the office cheered and waved flags, while some of the staff girls were out in the road handing chocolates and cigarettes to the camouflaged-by-confetti soldiers.

A man who carried his honours modestly was Corporal J. Wood, of New Lambton. All that the wearer of the Distinguished Conduct Medal ribbon would say was that he had been away two years and four months, and that he was wounded in the knee by a shell on the Somme.

Among the other decorated men were Sergeant John Gordon, of Milson's Point, who has the Military Medal awarded for bravery on the Somme; Corporal James Bailey, of Summer Hill, Military Medal (won at Ypres); and Private C. E. Hutton, an Anzac, with three years' service abroad, who was awarded the Military Medal at Fleurs.

Mr. Mowle and Mr. Harnett, officers of Parliament, were at the Buffet to welcome Captain Delfosse Badgery, of the Flying Corps, who was formerly one of the clerks in the Legislative Assembly. Captain Badgery went away with the 1st Australian Flying Men.

HIGHLAND BRIGADE.

GOVERNMENT'S DECISION UNCHANGED.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

In the Senate to-day the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) informed Senator Pratten (N.S.W.) that the Government had considered the representations made by the Highland Society and Scottish Association regarding the raising of a special contingent of men who would be entitled to wear kilts, but had not been able to adopt the suggestion. A reply in detail had been sent to the society this week.

REPATRIATION AND THE LABOUR PARTY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I regret having to address you again on the above subject, but I feel I cannot allow such a misleading concoction as appears in your issue of 11th inst. to go unchallenged. In the first place, I fail to see where I admit having packed a public meeting, and had a block vote given. What I did say was that I called a conference of the local War Chest and Lidcombe Soldiers' Relief Fund, and the two bodies selected five members. This was our only course, seeing his worship was endeavouring to have five others run, and the local Labour league were running five. Mr. Maunder seems to forget that the Soldiers' Relief and Welcome Home Committee has been in existence since August, 1914, and we have had very little sympathy or help from him, none at all since January, 1916, when he tried to shift me from the president's chair, and failed. I most emphatically deny even attempting to pack a public meeting. Mr. Maunder knows who packed the meeting (the soldiers' relations), who have recognised the work of those who were elected with me at that public meeting by such an overwhelming majority that there was no doubt in the minds of that great gathering who should in the future look after their boys' interests. There was no caucus of privileged persons. All our patriotic meetings are held with open doors, and any of the public are always welcome.

I desire no municipal or political capital. I have had all the municipal honours a municipality can give any man, and when Mr. Maunder has had 10 years of municipal life instead of a few months, he may realise the sacrifice of time and labour that office entails. Mr. Maunder is unfortunate in being unpopular with a large number of our residents, who have discovered that there is something greater required from a public man to-day than cheap jack oratory. Men are judged to-day in public affairs by their actions, not by the attempt at high-toned speeches. I am quite aware Mr. Maunder is a non-party man. He prefers to be a rail-sitter. Of the two gentlemen Mr. Maunder refers to, I hold in the highest esteem the former, who has proved himself an enthusiastic patriotic worker. The latter has only been in business a few months, and the chief objection in his particular case, was his being a non-resident. If a district is good enough to invest a sum of money in in a business, it should be good enough to live in. If not, then it is not good enough to cast equally good men aside to make room for a non-resident. In conclusion, I have only to say what I have done in this matter was done in an open manner, simply in the interests of those who have so loyally stuck to the patriotic work for the past three years and nine months. When our critics were following horse-racing we were building a soldier's home and looking after the interests of our boys that are away fighting for those who do nothing only growl and act the part of easy chair critics. Public opinion has been appealed to, and public opinion has answered in no mistaken voice.

I am, etc., E. L. KINGSLEY.

June 12.

WAR PRECAUTIONS ACT.

LABOUR PARTY'S OBJECTIONS.

REPLY TO MR. TUDOR.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The following letter, addressed to Mr. Tudor, leader of the Opposition Labour party in the House of Representatives, has been handed to the Press by the Acting Prime Minister, Mr. Watt, embodying the Government's reply to the representations made on May 10 by Mr. Tudor as to the Government's attitude in connection with the suggested repeal and modification of certain war precautions regulations:—

"In reply to your letter of the 10th ultimo, with reference to the recruiting conference and the statutory rules, regulations, and proclamations regarded by the Labour party as objectionable in themselves, or in their administration, and calculated to engender unnecessary bitterness, I desire to inform you that I have given the fullest consideration to the principles and illustrations detailed by you in your communication, with a view to reconsidering such of the rules, regulations, and proclamations as might reasonably be regarded as obstacles to recruiting. I note with gratification that the Labour party, being desirous of doing everything necessary and proper for the conduct of the war, takes no exception to any regulation which is capable of reasonable and equitable interpretation, and which is employed only in helping to secure the national safety and well-being. The general body of the regulations issued under the War Precautions Act is capable of such an interpretation. The importance of the impartial administration of the regulations is fully appreciated by the Government, but in the exercise of their discretion, whilst desirous of securing the goodwill of all sections of the community, the Government must be guided more by the nature of the acts and the national interests involved than by the consideration of the effect that any official action is likely to have in giving offence to any particular class of persons in the community.

"The Government appreciates with you the value of free discussion, the right of the public speech, and the freedom of the Press. But in war time rights fully recognised in peace are necessarily subject to certain limitations in the national interests. You mention the limitations imposed to withhold matters advantageous to the enemy or likely to give offence to an Allied Power. The Government holds strongly the view that the further limitation, not mentioned by you, is also necessary—the prohibition of matters prejudicial to recruiting. You make reference to the censorship of the Press, but you suggest the repeal of no particular regulation in this regard. It is presumed, therefore, that you are more concerned with the administration in this connection. In reply I desire to inform you that recently a conference of representatives of the Press was held to consider the Press censorship. A committee of four was constituted as a Board of Appeal. The Labour Press is represented, and any matter on which the Press feel themselves aggrieved can be referred to this board and dealt with. It is considered that this should remove any objections which have been raised in connection with the administration.

"You specify Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 304, and various amendments, and presumably refer particularly to regulation 42 of the Military Service Referendum regulations which deals with the making of false statements of fact of a kind likely to affect the judgment of electors in relation to their votes as regards administration. Instructions were given some time ago to take no further action in any matter arising out of this regulation, and the Government is prepared to repeal it.

"As regards Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 182, mentioned by you, that is, the regulation which prevents the unlawful assembly of individuals in and around Parliament House, this regulation corresponds with the statutory protection which exists in connection with the State Parliament. The area in which it operates around the Federal Parliament House is the same as that which previously existed in connection with the State Parliament. As it in no way affects the general right of citizens holding public meetings anywhere except in the prohibited area, the Government cannot see how the existing regulation can be said to interfere with the right of citizens freely to discuss public matters.

"With repect to those statutory rules which, in your judgment, prejudicially affect the status of industrial organisations and the conditions of labour and employment, I desire to inform you that the view of the Government with regard to those specifically mentioned by you is as follows:—Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 198, imposes a penalty upon those who interfere with or hinder the discharge, loading, coaling, or despatch of shipping, or with industrial operations connected therewith. This regulation being necessary for the protection of transports in time of war, its continuance is considered necessary for the national well-being and efficient prosecution of the war. Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 196, prevents the institution of certain actions arising out of the failure to perform certain contracts for the sale and delivery of wheat. As the regulation was intended by the Government for the protection of the Commonwealth and State Governments and officers and authorities of the Commonwealth and the States in respect of action taken in the public interest in connection with the wheat pool, it is difficult to understand why the repeal of this regulation was asked for. Several regulations of a similar character exist, and are necessary for conserving public interests. This regulation can in no way be construed as an obstacle to recruiting. Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 212, confers upon the Governor-General the power to de-register organisations registered under any Commonwealth or State Act. This regulation was intended only to deal with the general strike conditions then existing, and the Government is now prepared to repeal it. Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 213, prohibits interference with shearing operations and the loading, carriage, handling, or storing of wool. As the supply of wool to the Imperial Government is essential to the operations of the war, the Government cannot see its way to terminate this regulation; moreover, its object is, and its retention is, calculated to assist industrial unions in the exercise of their lawful right. Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 222, confers upon the Governor-General power to cancel provisions in industrial agreements giving preference to unionists. This regulation was intended to deal with strike conditions that have passed away, and it will be repealed. Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 218, deals with the partial avoidance of the provisions of certain agreements and awards conferring preference. As certain rights have accrued to persons under this regulation it is not considered just that these persons should be deprived of whatever protection the regulation gives them. The Government is quite willing to reconsider any regulation which is not directly associated with the war, the immediate effect of which can be shown to widen the area of unemployment. The desire of the Government is to extend rather than limit the area of employment in Australia.

"Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 233, of which you seek the repeal, is the regulation which gives the Government control over race meetings and other sporting events. It has been found necessary in the public interests to limit horse-racing and boxing. The Government cannot see its way to repeal this regulation, especially in view of the strong public opinion which exists that unrestricted sport is prejudicial to recruiting.

"I presume you refer in paragraph 5 of your letter rather to the administration of Statutory Rule, 1917, No. 255, than its repeal. It is essential that the Government should have the power to prohibit the publication, possession, or transmission of certain prohibited publications. You mention a number which have already been proclaimed as prohibited publications. The Government has already reviewed the list with reference to the publications mentioned by you, and will further consider how far it is necessary to continue the prohibition of any particular publication.

"You ask for the repeal of rules which you say are 'apparently designed to placate the animus of one section of the community against another section, and conveying imputations of disloyalty on the part of a large portion of the population,' and you specify in this connection the repeal of Statutory Rule, 1918, No. 86. The statutory rule to which you refer is aimed at the punishing of any person who advocates, incites, or encourages disloyalty or hostility to the British Empire, or to the cause of the British Empire in the present war, or advocated the dismemberment of the British Empire. The regulation also makes it an offence for any person to wear or display any badge, flag, emblem, banner, or symbol being or purporting to be the badge, flag, banner, emblem, or symbol of a country with which the King is now at war, or of any body or association who are disaffected to the British Empire, or the society, association, or movement known as Sinn Fein. From the reading of the regulation you will see that the regulation is not designed to 'placate the animus' of any section of the community against any other section, but is distinctly aimed at the prevention of disloyalty or hostility to the Empire. As the advocacy of such disloyalty or hostility at the present time is so obviously inimical to the preservation of the Commonwealth, the Government cannot consent to its repeal. I cannot see how it can be contended that the existence of such a regulation can be said to be an obstacle in the way of recruiting.

"The Government will take immediate steps to repeal such of the above regulations, the repeal of which I have specifically indicated.

"In conclusion, the Government recognises the desirableness of Parliamentary action as a general rule, but the object of the enactment of the War Precautions Act was to enable prompt and effective action to be taken in war time. Moreover, the vast majority of the regulations made under that Act are distinctly of a type usually made by the Executive, acting under statutory authority. The Government has already, by the release of persons imprisoned, the remission of outstanding penalties, and the abandonment of prosecutions, redeemed the promises made at the recent conference, and assures you that in the administration of the regulations, regard will be had to the attitude taken by the Government at that conference."

CLOTHING TRADE.

Evidence was given to the Interstate Commission yesterday by Sydney manufacturers of woollen goods.

Thomas Longworth, chairman of directors of the Australian Woollen Mills, Marrickville, said, leaving out the war-time profits tax, the rate of profit had increased since the outbreak of war, and even deducting the war-time profits tax it was better than in 1914, but lower than 1913 and 1912. Wool tops and yarns, which were 20 per cent. of output in 1917, were more profitable than worsteds. The mill supplied war comforts funds and the Red Cross with knitting yarns at very much lower prices than were obtainable in the ordinary trade way. Between 80,000 and 90,000 lb had been supplied to those organisations. Merino wool was now 22¼d per lb; the same class in 1914 cost 12d per lb; increase being 90 per cent. Crossbred in 1914 cost 11½d per lb, and the cost was now 16½d per lb, a rise of 46 per cent. The percentages were, perhaps, not a fair average of the trade because the company's plant could only use superior combing wool. The factory's output was practically sold out for 12 months; the average period in normal times for which forward contracts were booked was nine months. After the military contracts had ceased, it was necessary to "ration" customers in order to make supplies go round. The average customer could individually only get about a third of what was wanted, but as a general rule, customers were ordering much more than prior to the war. The company could not take another customer at the present time. The wholesale trade and four or five large retailers were supplied; he could see no objection to other retailers being supplied if they wanted quantity, but the company could not cut pieces to suit the ordinary retail trade.

The Commissioner: Does the 5/6 per lb, at which you supply the Red Cross with knitting yarn, return a reasonable profit?—It is bare cost. Only one person other than war workers has received any of that wool, and that was by mistake. The contract price for khaki was 5/7 to 6/2 per yard; prices for other materials ranged from 9/5 to 13/, but they were of different wools and dyes.

Continuing, Mr. Longworth said he found the British dye very satisfactory, except in price. German dyes cost 9d, and the British make cost 3/6.

In answer to Mr. McKnight, witness said he prepared the wool for the returned soldiers' weavers, and when it had been woven, he milled, finished, and pressed the material for the society.

Robert Vicars, a director of John Vicars and Co., Ltd., of the Sydney Woollen Mills, said the two companies were under one ownership, the former having purchased the latter, but they were conducted as separate entities. The Marrickville Mills worked suitings requiring the best grades of wool. The Sydney Woollen Mills, at Parramatta, made suitings of cheaper cloth, practically all containing cotton. Sixty to 70 per cent. of their output was stamped every two yards. Some wholesalers, however, objected to the branding. The output of the Marrickville Mills was in 1917 approximately the same as in 1913, though the value was greater; the output in 1915 and 1916 was greater than in 1917. The warehouse owners had informed him that the Australian tweed was the cheapest they could find in the world. They could not supply more than about half the quantity they were asked for; presumably, therefore, they could put up their prices if they chose, and still be able to sell their goods.

John Dibble, managing director of Henry Bull and Co., Ltd., woollen manufacturers and softgoodsmen, said that the output of the Liverpool mill was greater than in the pre-war period. The mill was only a department of the business. The net profit on the whole business was more than 50 per cent. higher than in 1914 which was due to larger business and reduced ratio of working expenses. The expenses had not increased more than 4 per cent. in the period. When the market prices rose between buying and the disposal of the stocks the policy was to follow the firm's established custom of selling at cost price, plus a fixed percentage.

Sydney Harold Maddo, manager of the Sydney agency of the Leigh Mills Co., Ltd., of England, said prices of worsted and dress goods had increased on an average about 200 per cent. Dress serge, for instance, selling at 2/4 prior to the war, was now selling at 7/; those were the prices in England.

VIOLET DAY.

The "Violet" effort in aid of the finances of the Soldiers' Club, which is to take place to-day, bears every appearance of being a big success. The executive, headed by Dr. Mary Booth and Miss Grace Burrows, has created a very wide organisation.

Bands will play at many points; marches, also have been arranged. The musicians will also assist at functions in various parts of the city.

The executive has been assured of a good deal of support in the way of house decoration. But the members make a special appeal for the display of flags and other decorations to-day. Anything, in fact, that can add to the gaiety of the city will be an assistance to "Violet Day."

All sorts of flowers will be on sale, and donations of all sorts are asked for.

AUSTRALIA IS THE PRIZE.

(BY A WORKING MAN.)

Australia is the prize of defeat, or of a negotiated peace; complete victory alone can save us.

Suggestion after suggestion has been made as to what ought to be done to meet the present crisis, forming committees, leagues, etc, but nothing is done. Why? Because the ultimate initiative lies with the people themselves, and they will do nothing until they realise the grave position, which at present they do not.

I am of the working class, solely dependent on my wages. I read and re-read two and three newspapers a day, and recognise that this country is being fought for just as much as if Sydney were in ashes, and we were endeavouring to hold the Blue Mountains against the Germans. But unfortunately the great majority of the people do not read the newspapers sufficiently, and utterly fail to realise the horror of defeat, an event which is hovering between possibility and probability, and the less we realise it the more probable it becomes.

For one thing, there is nothing to make people realise. A man is told that Australia is in imminent danger, and he ought to enlist, or give up some of his hard-won union rights and privileges. He can wear the soles off his boots looking for evidence of this danger, and can find none; the shops are just as full, money just as plentiful, profits just as large; the theatres, picture shows, hotels, racecourses, etc, just as lively as ever. More big motor cars, masses of brass and varnish, full of ladies busy shopping; the shop windows full of expensive fancies. Everything he sees points to the country being more busy and prosperous than ever. Which is he to believe? What he is told, sort of hearsay evidence, or what he actually sees with his own eyes.

A working man unconsciously looks to the "heads" for a lead. He knows that they read more than he does, and have means of information that are denied him. When he sees them spending just as much or more time and money on frivolities and pleasure the natural suspicion of the under-dog makes him liable to think they are taking advantage of their position to work some scheme at his expense, and are only telling him that the country is in danger (while the actions point the other way), and he ought to enlist, etc., just to answer their own purpose. Therefore, they must take the lead, and show by their actions that they realise.

We have, to a certain extent, realised the horrors of war, 12,000 miles removed, but we must try and realise the horrors of defeat by an unscrupulous and unprincipled enemy, the education and training of whom for generations has been for the purpose of eradicating all sense of honour and the finer sentiments which distinguish mankind from the brute beasts. This enemy has been badly mauled and punished by Australian soldiers. What mercy could we or our womenfolk expect at his hands? Proof of this apathy or lack of realisation can be heard in any tram, train, workshop, etc.—any and every subject can be heard under discussion. Horses, pictures, politics, sport, anything but the only thing that matters—the war. Remarks verging on the disloyal can be heard uttered by men who we know in their hearts are as loyal as we are; but they are war-weary, and do not realise that the horrors of defeat would be far worse than the horrors of war.

Another proof can be seen in the manner in which some of the girls and women rush the returned wounded soldiers, men who have faced death and horrors worse than death to save these very girls from becoming German barrack-room sluts, for that is what defeat would mean, and is the expressed intention of the Germans. When these men broken in mind and body are provided with money that in no way compensates them for what they have gone through (£1000 would not do that), and taught a trade so that they are not entirely dependent on other people's efforts, the girls take the money off them in the form of theatre tickets, motor rides, as fast as the men obtain it. We cannot blame the men, the money is their own, and we cannot conceive what they have been through, and to what extent their minds have become unbalanced; in any case, the reaction after the hard life they have led would make them very susceptible to female society. Are these girls dead to all sense of gratitude? No: they simply do not realise—that's all.

How different it would be if these girls only did realise that these men have actually given the best of their lives for them, and it is sisterly care and kind attention that is required to nurse the wounded men back to some semblance of health.

No effort is too much to reach the intelligence of those people who do not read the newspapers to make them realise that we are even engaged in war, not to mention the possibility of defeat and what defeat would mean; or, if the effort is made, it is done in such a way as to do more harm than good. One instance will serve to show this. At a picture show, among some very clever and attractive animated advertisements, a portion of Lloyd George's message to the dominions was put on, plain black and white, indistinct, and only on for a few seconds—apparently put on as a matter of form. A comparison of the relative importance of the war and So-and-so's cough mixture and the poor effort to bring the war before the people's notice was ludicrous, pitiful—words fail to describe it. If the cough mixture advertisement impressed people more than Lloyd George's message, they would naturally carry away the idea that it was of more importance. It is a pity that people are like this; but it is a fact, and it is facts, hard facts, that have to be faced.

As a working man among working men, I have shown that the cause of this apathy is lack of realisation. Can the people be made to realise? Yes, they can, if the right man undertakes and is given the facilities for the job. Has Australia the man—a man who can devise ways and means of reaching the intelligence of the people, touching their imagination, so that each individual, both poor and rich, man, woman, and child, understands that winning the war is the only thing that really matters, that they personally are vitally affected, and have everything at stake—life, honour, home, wealth, unions; in fact, everything that they hold dear?

The man to do this must be impartial, above suspicion of having ulterior motives, not intimate with any political party, but have the power of gaining the confidence of them all, and must be willing to sacrifice his public life in doing this work, as thousands upon thousands of men have sacrificed their mortal life.

Of all countries under the sun, the Germans desire this the most. They almost look upon Australia as actually made to order for them, and as long as they have anything to negotiate with they will try and swap it for Australia. Victory alone will secure us. Australia is the prize.

A.L.P. CONFERENCE.

A sitting of the New South Wales A.L.P. conference was held at the Trades Hall last night.

The organising committee submitted a report in which they stated that during the year they had classified the whole of the State and Federal electorates with a view of concentration for organising purposes. In conjunction with the Parliamentary parties the committee had arranged for each member of Parliament to take over the organising of one electorate other than his own. It was also decided that a general organiser should be appointed to take control of the organising of the State, and that an organising department be created in connection with head office to deal with the many problems associated therewith. Applications were called for the position, and Mr. A. Rae was elected. The organising committee also presented a scheme for financing a special organising edition of a Labour newspaper.

It was also decided to ask the unions to contribute funds towards the object.

Mr. Kerr, of Broken Hill, moved that a deputation should wait upon the Government and urge that men who were imprisoned owing to incidents arising out of the Broken Hill strike should be released. The motion was carried. Mr. Iceton, colliery employees, said that an attempt was being made to stifle free speech in public places. He moved that a committee be appointed to attend to the safeguarding of free speech.

Corporal Murphy (Returned Soldiers and Sailors' Political League), who seconded the motion, said he would say that the Returned Sailors and Soldiers' Imperial League, which was interesting itself in the stifling of free speech, was a branch of the National party. It was decided to refer the matter to the executive for attention.

The conference devoted a considerable portion of the sitting to the consideration of a number of suggestions put forward by Mr. Catts, M.P., in reference to war credits.

Mr. Kelly (Mascot) moved an amendment, which, he said, would make the wealthy people pay for the war.

Mr. Ross said that the real rulers of the world were the financial magnates.

STUD EWES FOR JAPAN.

WAGGA, Thursday.

Mr. J. Bicket, of Kyeamba Meadows, Wagga, has trucked 28 Shropshire ewes to the order of the Japanese Government. These ewes were bred by Mr. Bicket, who has been breeding Shropshires for the past six years from Tasmanian blood.

FEDERAL SESSION.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The Federal Ministry is determined that if possible Parliament shall adjourn this week, and for this reason the House of Representatives has sat all night discussing a motion for a three months' Supply Bill.

The Opposition speeches came to an end at 3 o'clock after the House had been sitting 24 hours, and the bill was quickly passed through all stages.

Discussion was resumed on the Estimates for 1917-18.

Mr. Falkiner (N.S.W.) said if there was one thing more than another that put up the price of meat it was the threat of "wiping out" the big man and the capitalist—the outcome of class prejudice and class hatred which was so freely made by Labour members and speakers. The Commission's mistake would be most ludicrous if they did not threaten to rob the pastoralists of millions of well-earned money. The country was understocked, and the grazier was a competitor with the butcher for sheep.

Progress was reported at 10.5 p.m., and the House adjourned till 11 a.m. to-morrow. The sitting lasted 31 hours.

It is the intention of the Federal Ministry to conclude the business now before Parliament by Saturday afternoon. Both Houses will sit to-morrow night, and will meet again on Saturday morning.

RED CROSS FUND.

The hon. treasurers of the Australian Red Cross Day have announced that the cash banked had reached a total of £259,679. Added to this there were amounts promised and payable in instalments totalling £9500, and amounts in the hands of committees, which had not yet been remitted to headquarters, amounting to £48,000. This gave a grand total of £317,179. In addition to this a considerable proportion of the Kitchener Flag Fund has yet to be paid in, besides which there is a number of country centres which have furnished no advices, but from which the committee have good reason to believe that substantial remittances will be made.

The balance-sheet of the Randwick Red Cross Day collection shows that a total of £2714 2s 2d was raised, the various centres contributing as follows:—Coogee, £888/14/4; Clovelly, £115/15/; Kensington, £425/7/4; South Kensington, £84/17/; North Randwick, £56/9/4; South Randwick, £151/13/4; Randwick, £1291/5/10.

The infant classes of the Parkes Superior Public School recently gave a concert in aid of the Red Cross, and netted the sum of £30 13s.

A patriotic sports carnival at Bywong Station, Queanbeyan, the property of Mr. Anthony Hordern, resulted in £250 being raised in aid of the Australian Red Cross.

The collections at Grafton towards the Australia Red Cross Day totalled £805. The contributions at South Grafton amounted to upwards of £600.

COOMA.—The Cooma Red Cross depot has decided to send away £150 divided as follows:—£50 for the Italian Red Cross Day, £50 to the Central Fund, £20 for prisoners of war, £20 for Violet Day, and £10 for the dependents of sailors and soldiers. Mr. H. Mawson gave 85 cases of apples, which the depot forwarded to the Fruit and Vegetable Depot at Sydney.

GOULBURN.—The amount raised for Red Cross Day has reached £5024, which is probably a record for any provincial district. More money has to come.

NEW HOSPITAL BOARD.

The State Cabinet has adopted a proposal by Mr. Fitzgerald, Minister for Health, for a committee, to be known as the Hospital Advisory Board, consisting of Dr. Robert Thomson Paton, Director-General of Public Health, Mr. Edward Burns Harkness, J.P., Under-Secretary Department of Public Health, Dr. William George Armstrong, Senior Medical Officer, Public Health, Dr. George Henry Taylor, medical officer railways and tramways, and Dr. Richard Arthur, M.L.A.

This board will consider the whole question of public health and hospitals throughout the State, and will advise the Minister. Among the particular subjects which will come within the purview of this advisory board will be the co-ordination and prevention of overlapping of hospital work, embracing the closing of unnecessary hospitals and prevention of the establishment of such, hospitals finance, and the administration of the Government aid, classification of hospitals, achievement of economy in hospitals administration, Government representation on hospital committees, extension of industrial contribution schemes for country hospitals and for subsidised doctors, uniform system of accounts, and hospital sites and plans.

The Minister says that a special effort must be made to create a more scientific organisation of the health services of the State, particularly in view of the immense burden that will be cast upon the State authorities by the duties we owe to the returned soldiers.

FARES ON NORTHERN LINE.

A deputation representing the Northern Suburbs Joint Committee waited on the Minister for Railways (Mr. Ball) yesterday, and protested against the increased railway fares on the Strathfield to Hornsby line.

Mr Thompson, M.L.A., said that the railway fares were increased by 20 per cent. in 1916, and by a further 10 per cent. in 1917. This, together with an increase of 50 per cent. in the tramway fares, was an exceptionally heavy tax on the people of the northern suburbs.

Mr. Ball promised to put the matter before the Commissioner for Railways to get his views on the subject, and let them know at a later date what could be done.

LIQUOR ACT.

According to a return presented to Parliament there were, during 1917, 31 convictions for Sunday trading, 115 convictions for selling liquor during prohibited hours, other than on Sundays, 107 convictions for the sale of liquor without a license, and 17 convictions for the sale of adulterated liquor.

MR. STOREY'S ATTACK.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It is certainly a newly-revealed Mr. Storey who, without any provocation, deliberately attacked me at the Trades Hall, and in the process introduced a new principle in public life of divulging private conversations and of garbling them in the process. The fact that he was misreported or did not think he was being reported does not mend matters for him.

There are only two features of Mr. Storey's rejoinder which need be considered. The first is his reference to the North Sydney Ferries and the Australian Gas Light Company. This, of course, is mere political guff, for Mr. Storey knows that had he been in office as Premier he would have had to take the same step or to have resumed the two great services referred to, which is impossible in the present state of Australian finance.

Mr. Storey says that the reasons for the expulsion of myself and others from the Labour movement by the executive body "are now so well known that it is quite unnecessary for him to state them." This general publicity of the expulsions does not make them legal. But Mr. Storey's halting and oblique defence of the illegal expulsion of Holman, Hughes, Watson, M'Gowen, Spence, Pearce, and my humble self will place him in the position of being "estopped" from protesting when his own turn comes. I use the legal term, as Mr. Storey has thought it well to drag in my profession. The attainment of that profession by hard study has enabled me to appraise the style of special pleading which Mr. Storey has intuitively adopted, and which reminds me of some legal characters in Dickens.

I am glad Mr. Storey is happy in his present company, and so far as his Parliamentary colleagues are concerned, he is right. But he knows, and some of them know, that the axe and the block are preparing outside for him and them. I know him well enough to be certain that he will "crack hardy" up to the last, and will smile even when the guillotine descends and his head falls into the basket. The steadily rising diapason of the cry, "Where is Mr. Storey?" will outcrow any appeals he may make for justice and a fair deal.

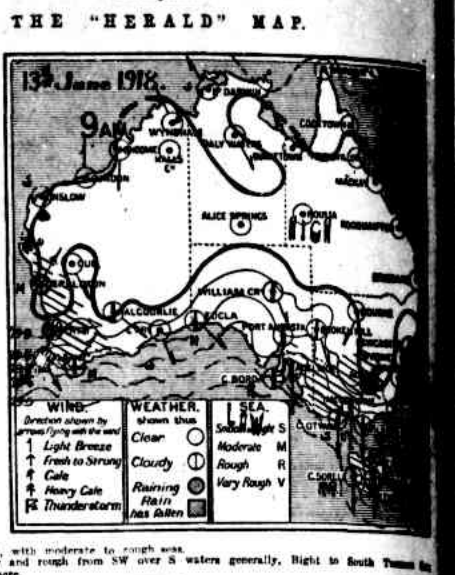
As to Mr. Storey's statement that he knows nothing of a letter which I wrote seeking an explanation of a statement of his, he has since had a copy of the letter placed in his hands, or, at any rate, sent through the usual source. I assume that he will not mislay the copy.

The only other point that remains to be touched upon is in regard to the strike. Does Mr. Storey as a Constitutionalist defend the strike? Does he not know that the strike was planned after the victory of the Nationalist party in both the State and Federal elections, and that boasts to that effect were made quite openly in certain circles? If Mr. Storey was a party to the strike, and defends it, is it not far more manly to come out and stand in the position of a devoted, if honest, revolutionist than in that of a disconcerted plotter against the success of State ownership? Mr. Storey says that he is quite happy with his political friends. Granted, but who are his political friends? At any rate, Mr. Storey has enough knowledge of the world to remind him that some of his "friends" will rejoice just as much at any hard knocks I give him in this controversy as they do at any he may give me. I am, etc.,

JOHN D. FITZGERALD.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



Since 9 a.m. on Wednesday, there has occurred a rather decided slump in pressure values in central parts of Australia, the central isobar being now 30.0 inches, whereas on Wednesday it was 30.1 inches. The "high" still occupies central and northern areas of the Continent, and its influence, in cooperation with Antarctic influences, which now occupy a considerable portion of the southern mainland, has been productive of further cold conditions in the early morning. But with the waning activity of the "high," the Antarctic disturbance should dominate the weather over our State. Consequently, the present indications favour cloudy, unsettled conditions generally, with more rain, chiefly in southern parts, and snow on southern tablelands; squally NW to W winds in southern districts, and later on coast. Cold night, with some frosts on the highlands. The congestion of the isobars about the southern shore of the Continent still favours squally westerly winds between Leeuwin and Gabo, with moderate to rough seas.

Ocean Forecast: Squally and rough from SW over S waters generally, Bight to South Tasman [illegible], smooth to moderate elsewhere.

CAPTAIN R. A. DOWLING.

Capt. R. A. Dowling, of the Australian Army Veterinary Corp, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dowling, of Ashfield, is being invalided home, and has been mentioned by Sir Douglas Haig in his despatch of November 7, 1917, for conspicuous services. He was educated at Sydney Grammar School, and took the degree of Bachelor of Veterinary Science at the Sydney University in December, 1914.

THE DAWSON FAREWELL.

Overwhelming enthusiasm marked the farewell concert in honour of Peter Dawson, at the Town Hall last night. The artist with the great rich voice was in such generous mood that, after Pinsuti's "It is I, Love," he came forward five times, adding "Invictus," "Clothes Props," "Simon the Cellarer," "The Drum Major," and "A Chip of the Old Block," after which he took two "silent recalls." The baritone's last song here for many a long day was in association with Miss Annie George (Mrs. Dawson), in "A Summer Night," arranged as a duet. Artists generously assisting were Messrs. Laurance Phillip, who made his farewell before leaving for San Francisco, Bryce Carter, Cyril Monk, Lawrence Campbell, and Lieut. Francis Blake (accompanist). All these, and Mr. Oswald Anderson (manager), joined the two principals at the end.

Mr. Lawrence Campbell made a speech of farewell to the departing soldier-artist. They all knew their friend as a successful singer, but that evening they honoured him even more as a man. (Cheers.) When they reflected that he was sacrificing a world-famous career for the sake of his country they realised what a wonderful example he was setting the laggards who should be at the front. (Cheers.) "Private Dawson," continued the speaker, "please accept from us, on behalf of everyone here to-night, our best wishes for your safe return. May you put us all again in this hall of song some day, and may God bless and keep you till that happy hour." (Loud cheers.)

FINANCIAL.

THE BANK OF AUSTRALASIA.

At the annual meeting of the Bank of Australasia in London, Mr. T. R. Johnson, the chairman of directors, well-known in Australia as at one time Chief Railway Commissioner of New South Wales, in moving the adoption of the report, made reference to the rate of dividend and bonus. That rate 17 per cent. free of income-tax was equal to 22 per cent. subject to tax. At first sight this might seem to be a large distribution, but it must be remembered that over and above the subscribed capital, there is a large amount of other capital in the form of reserves set aside by the proprietors from time to time employed in the business of the bank. With £30,000 added this half-year that fund stood at £2,905,000, or nearly 60 per cent. more than the subscribed capital of the bank. Taking the working capital then at £4,905,000, the rate subject to tax is not quite 9 per cent. on this amount, and free of tax not quite 7 per cent. The matter was also referred to by one of the proprietors, Mr. F. Tomkinson, who suggested that, perhaps, at some time shares might be issued in return for the capital which is now used as a reserve. Mr. H. Peel, Mr. T. R. Johnson, and Viscount Midleton were re-elected directors.

SHORTLAND ISLANDS' PLANTATION.

The report of the above company, that for the seventh year, covering the period ended January 31, shows that the output of copra was 67½ tons, and it is expected that further areas coming into bearing will double the yield for the current year. Area planted amounts to 1220 acres, with 66,178 cocoanut trees and 2202 rubber trees. The native labour force is 137—a reduction of 58 on the year. The expenditure was £5031, compared with £4079 in the preceding year. Calls of £10 per contributing share during the year yielded £4530, and it is intended to call up another £10 per share this year in instalments of £2/10/. The property is valued at £28,899.

SYDNEY BANK CLEARINGS.

The clearings of the Sydney banks for the week ended June 10 totalled £15,946,416, against £12,585,583 for the corresponding week last year. The totals at the nearest dates of the years enumerated may be compared as follows:—

January 1 to June 16, 1913	£152,660,570
January 1 to June 15, 1914	168,571,811
January 1 to June 14, 1915	153,360,795
January 1 to June 12, 1916	196,466,002
January 1 to June 11, 1917	203,577,096
January 1 to June 10, 1918	245,525,460

There has thus been an increase to date this year of £41,948,364. The clearings of the Melbourne banks for the week ended June 10 totalled £13,356,231, and from January 1 to June 10 totalled £216,082,642, an increase of £46,813,286.

DIRECTING RESEARCH.

The Commonwealth Government has lost no time in taking up on a large scale the obligation of directing research into the many scientific problems connected with increasing the production of our primary and manufacturing industries. Following upon the appointment of the Director of the Institute of Science and Industry, it is proposed to ask Parliament to vote £50,000 for the work of the institute in the coming financial year. It will be remembered that the Prime Minister, in outlining the scope of the institute, foreshadowed the establishment of a series of national laboratories at a cost of £150,000. Of the sum voted for the coming year £10,000 will be earmarked for capital expenditure on these laboratories.

DENTON HATS, LTD.

The directors of the Denton Hat Mills, Ltd., have notified shareholders that it is advisable to form a new company, with a capital of £150,000, to be styled Denton Hats, Ltd., which will take over the existing company as from December 31, 1917. The consent of the Federal authorities has been obtained. Shareholders in the old company will receive in the new company eight new shares for every five now held, and 10 shares are to be paid for in cash, making a total issue of 86,420 shares of £1 each in Denton Hats, Ltd., while the balance of 63,580 shares will be held in reserve for the present. When such shares are issued they will be first offered pro rata to shareholders at such prices as may then be determined.

INTERCOLONIAL INVESTMENT.

The half-yearly meeting of shareholders of the Intercolonial Investment Company was held yesterday, Mr. G. Dyson, chairman of directors, presiding. In moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, particulars of which have already appeared, the chairman said that the directors were pursuing a careful policy—the company was trading more within its capital than in past years, it had substantial reserves, and its prospects were good. The cash and liquid assets almost equalled the liabilities, and of the amounts owing to the company over 80 per cent. was secured on rent-producing properties. The motion was adopted.

RARE METALS.

A meeting has been called, to be held in the rooms of the Australian Metal Exchange, 77-79 Elizabeth-street, Sydney, on Monday next, 17th inst, at 2.30 p.m., to consider the present prices and conditions appertaining to wolfram, scheelite, and molybdenite. It is hoped that there will be a good attendance of those interested, and it is understood that an important statement will be made. The chairman of the exchange (Mr. Colin E. D. Rodgers) will preside.

INCOME TAXES.

"Manufacturer": The income is held to be earned in this State, as the goods were manufactured here.

MISCELLANEOUS QUERIES.

Mr. A. Ryan: The stamp duty on receipts was repealed by the Act, No. 8 of 1907, and was reimposed by Act No. 3 of 1914. "Stefun": The subscribed capital of a company is called "shares" when it is divided into portions of uniform amount, and "stock" when any desired amount may be bought or sold.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The wholesale price of vinegar has been fixed. The quotations are:—One to 10 gallons, /7½, larger quantities /6; pint bottles, loose 3/, cased 3/6; quart bottles, loose 4/6, cased 5/3. Good quality castor oil was scarce, and packers of the higher grades wanted 10/6 for half-pint bottles. Tinned fruits were quiet, but values were steady. Pineapples were to be had from 8/9 to 9/, but peaches commanded to 11/9. Lemon peel was dearer, at /9½. Orange peel moved up to /9½. On the other hand, citron peel was slightly cheaper, at 1/. There was a brisk demand for tinned fish, and in some instances prices were higher. First brands of Sockeye salmon, in 1lb tins, were worth 22/. Red Alaska fish was offered at 16/3, and "Pinks" at 13/. Herrings sold freely at unchanged rates. The inquiry for sardines was somewhat brighter, and Portuguese halves were not to be had under 10/6. For quarters 6/9 was wanted. Eastern produce was in strong hands. Desiccated cocoanut in ½lb containers changed hands at 7/, while whole ginger found buyers at /10½. Locally dressed rice moved out at from £23/10/ to £25/10/ a ton, and medium pearl tapioca at 36/. Oatmeal sold well at the fixed rates. All spices were firm. Mace realised 2/6, and nutmegs 1/9.

Manufactured metals sold at high rates. Black fencing wire changed hands at £52 and £54 for Nos. 8 and 10 respectively, while galvanised wire brought from £53 to £63, according to gauge. Stocks of barbed wire continued light. Files were good property at 27½per cent. on list. Rabbit traps and axes were unchanged.

On the local market yesterday rosin and turpentine were somewhat firmer. Mailler and Quereau, Ltd., writing from New York on April 18, stated that a considerable advance had taken place in all grades of rosin. Producers were finding great difficulty in securing labour even at high rates of wages, and there was also the increased cost of packages and transportation. The only thing that was keeping prices from being very much higher was the great difficulty in making export shipments. All indications pointed to higher prices and the certainty of a much smaller crop than usual. After a slight decline turpentine had a sharp advance, and was firmly held. Here also the cost of labour was a big factor, and cans and cases were three times as dear as formerly. Producers at the South stated that they could not go on producing at present prices. Shipments of both rosin and turpentine had been much smaller. Quantities going forward are unusually light.

There was some inquiry for woolpacks, and sales were reported on spot as high as 8/6. A little forward business was also transacted. Branbags were exceedingly scarce, and were nominally quoted at 16/.

There was no movement in pig products, which were in excellent demand. Bacon sold particularly well. River poultry was dearer. HOMEBUSH STOCK SALES.

SHEEP.

MARKET WEAKER.

There was a penning yesterday of 25,214 sheep and lambs, from 109 owners. They were mostly in lots from 90 to 400, but there were also several lots each of 900 to 1000 head. The different centres of the State were well represented on the consignment notes. The quality of the sheep was good, crossbreds preponderated, but there were more merinos than have been seen for some time; and they were of good quality. Trade sheep were in excellent condition, while the prime heavy crossbreds were plentiful. The attendance of buyers was quite up to the average, all sections of the trade being present. During the morning competition was fairly even, at about last day's average values, with odd sales making up to Monday's high closing rates, but in the afternoon there was less buoyancy in the market, and sales inclined to drag. This brought about a lowering tendency in values, and the market in consequence finished weaker. Easily the best line of sheep was offered by Wilkinson and Lavender, on behalf of the Tubbo Estate Company, of Whitton. It comprised 1190 merino wethers, which sold to 48/7, and averaged 47/. They were indeed very heavy sheep, and considering the weak state of the market, and the fact that one or more of the buyers of this class of sheep were temporarily not operating, the price secured was considered to be good. The same firm also sold on behalf of M. Robinson, of Wyalong, 559 cross wethers, which made up to 44/6, and averaged 42/1. They were about the best of the cross wethers in the day's supply. Joseph Leeds and Co. secured the highest price for cross ewes. They were the tops of a line which came from Perry and Sons, Ltd., of Narromine. They sold at 44/5. John Bridge and Co. had a few cross wethers from R. Gamble, of Gunningbland. These sold to 45/, and averaged 43/3. Cross ewes from the same owner made to 40/. E. A. McAthrel, of Brewarrina, forwarded a line of merino wethers which Winchcombe, Carson sold to 44/7, with an average of 40/6.

Among the principal sales were the following:—From F. R. Moore, of Garah, w to 40/7; from A. C. Philips, of Mullengudgery, x w to 40/4, and w to 33/10; from Miss Moore, of Garah, w to 35/10; from C. LAMBS.

The supply of prime lambs was a small one, but there were several pens of good quality. One line of 62 heavy cross lambs, which came from L. Menzies, of Coolamon, sold to 37/5, and averaged 36/2. Another consignment of 200 cross lambs from A. C. Phillips, of Mullengudgery, made to 30/5, and averaged 28/10.

CATTLE.

SLIGHTLY DEARER.

The cattle yarded totalled 1910 from 62 owners. The quality of the offering was good. It embraced all classes from calves to heavy weight cattle. While the average consignment ranged from a truck of 10 to 40 head, there were several larger consignments. From the Elsinora Station 200 were listed, and about 100 arrived from the Buttabone Past. Co., Ltd. Buyers were present from the metropolis, and from mountain and coastal districts. Re-stockers were also in attendance. Competition was free, and values were slightly in sellers' favour with an occasional advance of 10/. As the sales proceeded the market became even more buoyant, and generally the day's quotations were from 10/ to 15/ dearer than on Monday. The highest price for bullocks was £28/10/, which Dalgety and Co. secured for a line of 18 that came from T. Rouston, of Barmedman. The line averaged £20/13/. The largest consignment of cattle was handled by Maiden Bros. They came from the Elsinore station, and were trucked at Bourke. In this consignment there were 134 bullocks and steers, which sold to £22/17, and averaged £18/7/6, and there were 60 cows, which made £19/6/, and averaged £15/9/5.

Among the principal sales were the following:—From Buttabone Pastoral Co., Ltd., of Warren, 83 bullocks and steers, to £19/14/, avg. £17/12/6, and 8 cows to £19/18/6, avg. £16/15/; from T. MINING.

A limited turnover was recorded in mining shares on the Stock Exchange again yesterday. Silver-lead and copper stocks appeared to suffer most depression. Hampden fell 1/ to 20/, in sympathy with the Melbourne market, and among Barriers, Junction, con., eased to 8/9, while Junction North recovered 3d to 20/6. The higher-priced Broken Hill propositions did not appear on the sales board. Tin shares received a fair share of attention. Ratrut fell 1/ to 23/3, but Trong hardened 1½d to 18/1½, while Vegetable Creek and Tongkah Harbour Compound were only a fraction weaker. Other tin issues remained firm.

Gold ventures provided some interest for speculators. Local and Queensland concerns were quiet. Among Westonias, Deeps was the only stock to receive much attention, and after some fluctuation closed 7½d lower, at 17/6. A wire from the Edna May Central mine announced that the No. 4 level rise connected with the No. 1 east winze of the No. 3 level. The reef was 4ft wide, and was worth 20/. Centrals remained firm in the vicinity of 14/. A. I. Gaffney, a Victorian stock, provided exchange at 35/6. The mine manager announces that a rise from the No. 12 level cut a well-defined floor dipping east, solid stone 18in wide showing gold.

DAM GIVES WAY.

BROKEN HILL, Thursday.

The south mine slime dam on Eyre-street, at the edge of the mine lease, south Broken Hill, broke away this morning, and several hundreds of tons of slime were soon distributed over the footpath and road in Eyre-street. Men were quickly put on to clear the street, and make it available for traffic. One employee, Wm. Brougham, was carried away in the break, and had subsequently to be taken home in an ambulance, suffering from shock. Mr. Wainwright, general manager, of the mine, says that it is possible that the company will not use this dam again, as a new dam on the South African principle is being prepared further south.

MOTORING FATALITY.

LONGREACH, Thursday.

Mrs. T. Scanlan, a nurse, was killed in a motor car accident near Stonehenge. It appears that the car, driven by T. McPhellamy of Windorah, was on its way home when a tyre blew out. The car turned over, killing Mrs. Scanlan instantly.

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

"Queer!" observed Gilling. "Decidedly queer! There may be some explanation, you know; I've known stranger things than that turn out to be perfectly straight and plain when they were gone into. But—putting all the facts together—I don't think there's much doubt that there's something considerably wrong in this case. I should like to repeat it to my principals—I must go up to town in any event this afternoon. Better let me have all those documents, Mr. Dennie—I'll give you a proper receipt for them. There's something very valuable in them, anyhow."

"What?" asked Copplestone.

"The address in St. Louis from which that Marston Greyle wrote to Bassett Oliver," replied Gilling. "We can communicate with that address—at once. We may learn something there. But," he went on, turning to Mrs. Greyle, "I want to learn something here—and now. I want to know where and under what circumstances the Squire came to Scarhaven. You were here then, of course, Mrs. Greyle? you can tell me?"

"He came very quietly," replied Mrs. Greyle. "Nobody in Scarhaven—unless it was Peter Chatfield—knew of his coming. In fact, nobody in these parts, at any rate—knew he was in England. The family solicitors in London may have known. But nothing was ever said or written to me, though my daughter, failing this man, is the next in succession."

"I do wish you'd leave all that out, mother!" exclaimed Audrey. "I don't like it."

"Whether you like it or not, it's the fact," said Mrs. Greyle imperturbably, "and it can't be left out. Well, as I say, no one knew the Squire had come to England, until one day Chatfield calmly walked down the quays with him, introducing him right and left. He brought him here."

"Ah!" said Gilling. "That's interesting. Now I wonder if you found out if he was well up in the family history?"

"Not then, but afterwards," answered Mrs. Greyle. "He is particularly well up in the Greyle records—suspiciously well up."

"Why suspiciously?" asked Copplestone.

"He knows more—in a sort of antiquarian and historian fashion—than you'd suppose a young man of his age would," said Mrs. Greyle. "He gives you the impression of having read it up—studied it deeply. And—his usual tastes don't lie in that direction."

"Ah!" observed Mr. Dennie, musingly. "Bad sign, ma'am—bad sign! Looks as if he had been—shall we say put up to overstudying his part. That's possible! I have known men who were so anxious to be what one calls letter-perfect, Mr. Copplestone, that though they knew their parts they didn't know how to play them. Fact, sir!"

While the old actor was chuckling over this reminiscence, Gilling turned quietly to Mrs. Greyle.

"I think you suspect this man?" he said.

"Frankly—yes," replied Mrs. Greyle. "I always have done, though I have said so little——"

"Mother!" interrupted Audrey. "Is it really worth while saying so much now? After all, we know nothing, and if this is all mere supposition—however," she broke off, rising and going away from the group, "perhaps I had better say nothing."

Copplestone, too, rose and followed her into the window recess.

"I say!" he said entreatingly. "I hope you don't think me interfering? I assure you——"

"You!" she exclaimed. "Oh, no!—of course. I think you're anxious to clear things up about Mr. Oliver. But I don't want my mother dragged into it—for a simple reason. We've got to live here—and Chatfield is a vindictive man."

"You're frightened of him?" said Copplestone incredulously. "You!"

"Not for myself," she answered, giving him a warning look and glancing apprehensively at Mrs. Greyle, who was talking eagerly to Mr. Dennie and Gilling. "But my mother is not as strong as she looks, and it would be a blow to her to leave this place, and we are the squire's tenants, and therefore at Chatfield's mercy. And you know that Chatfield does as he likes! Now do you understand?"

"It maddens me to think that you should be at Chatfield's mercy," muttered Copplestone. "But do you really mean to say that if—if Chatfield thought you—that is, your mother—were mixed up in anything relating to the clearing up of this affair he would——"

"Drive us out without mercy," replied Audrey. "That's dead certain."

"And that your cousin would let him?" exclaimed Copplestone. "Surely not."

"I don't think the Squire has any control over Chatfield," she answered. "You have seen them together."

"If that's so," said Copplestone, "I shall begin to think there is something queer about the Squire in the way your mother suggests. It looks as if Chatfield had a hold on him. And in that case——"

He suddenly broke off as a smart automobile drove up to the cottage door and set down a tall, distinguished-looking man who, after a glance at the little house, walked quickly up the garden. Audrey's face showed surprise.

"Mother," she said, turning to Mrs. Greyle. "There's Lord Altmore here. He must want you. Or shall I go?"

Mrs. Greyle quitted the room hastily. The others heard her welcome the visitor, lead him up the tiny hall; they heard a door shut. Audrey looked at Copplestone.

"You've heard of Lord Altmore, haven't you?" she said. "He's our biggest man in these parts—he owns all the country at the back, mountains, valleys, everything. The Greyle land shuts him off from the sea. In the old days Greyles and Altmores used to fight over their boundaries, and——"

Mrs. Greyle suddenly showed herself again, and looked at her daughter.

"Will you come here, Audrey?" she said. "You gentlemen will excuse both of us for a few minutes?"

Mother and daughter went away, and the two young men drew up their chairs to the table at which Mr. Dennie sat, and exchanged views with him on the curious situation. Half an hour went by; then steps and voices were heard in the hall and the garden; Mrs. Greyle and Audrey were seeing their visitor out to his car. In a few minutes the car sped away, and they came back to the parlour. One glance at their faces showed Gilling that some new development had cropped up, and he nudged Copplestone.

"Here is remarkable news!" said Mrs. Greyle as she went back to her chair. "Lord Altmore called to tell me of something that he thought I ought to know. It is almost unbelievable, yet it is a fact. Marston Greyle—if he is Marston Greyle!—has offered to sell Lord Altmore the entire Scarhaven estate by private treaty. Imagine it!—the estate, which has belonged to the Greyles for five hundred years!"

CHAPTER XV.

THE CABLEGRAM FROM NEW YORK.

The two younger men received this announcement with no more than looks of astonished inquiry, but the elder one coughed significantly, had further recourse to his snuffbox, and turned to Mrs. Greyle, with a knowing glance.

"My dear lady," he said impressively. "Now this is a matter in which I believe I can be of service—real service. You may have forgotten the fact—it is all so long ago—and perhaps I never mentioned it in the old days—but the truth is that before I went on the stage, I was in the law. The fact is, I am a duly and fully qualified solicitor—though," he added, with a dry chuckle, "it is a good five and twenty years since I paid the six pounds for the necessary annual certificate. But I have not forgotten my law—or some of it—and no doubt I can furbish up a little more, if necessary. You say that Mr. Marston Greyle, the present owner of Scarhaven, has offered to sell his estate to Lord Altmore. But—is not the estate entailed?"

"No," replied Mrs. Greyle. "It is not."

Mr. Dennie's face fell—unmistakably. He took another pinch of snuff, and shook his head.

"Then in that case," he said drily, "all the lawyers in the world can't help. It's his—absolutely—and he can do what he pleases with it. Five hundred years, you say? Remarkable—that a man should want to sell land his forefathers have walked over for half a thousand years. Extraordinary."

"Did Lord Altmore say if any reason had been given him as to why Mr. Greyle wished to sell?" asked Gilling.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Greyle, who was obviously greatly upset by the recent news. "He did. Mr. Greyle gave as his reason that the north does not suit him, and that he wishes to buy an estate in the south of England. He approached Lord Altmore first because it is well known that the Altmores have always been anxious to extend their own borders to the coast."

"Does Lord Altmore want to buy?" asked Gilling.

"It is very evident that he would be quite willing to buy," said Mrs. Greyle.

(To be continued.)

WAR-TIME PROHIBITION.

At a meeting of the New South Wales branch of the Australian National Prohibition League it was resolved to appeal to the Federal Government to exercise the powers given by the War Precautions Act, and prohibit the production and sale of intoxicants, at least until the end of the war and during the period of demobilisation. It was also decided to protest against the sale by the State police authorities of confiscated liquors seized at sly-grog selling establishments.

STATE ABATTOIRS.

Mr. W. Blacket, K.C., the Royal Commissioner appointed to inquire into matters connected with the State abattoirs at Homebush, heard further evidence yesterday.

Early yesterday morning the Commissioner visited the depot at Pyrmont, and when he resumed the sittings of the Commission later in the day at Parliament House, Mr. Pitt, who appears for the stock, meat, and allied industries, said he had been informed that during the Commissioner's inspection of the depot the chairman of the Meat Board had made a statement which might render it unnecessary to call further evidence in regard to it. Mr. King, he understood, had remarked during the inspection that the depot was unsuitable, that he had nothing to say in its favour, and that it ought to be abolished.

Mr. King said the depot was erected as a temporary structure. He admitted that it was unsuitable for present requirements. The railway facilities were inadequate, and it was incapable of sufficient improvement to render it suitable for the trade. It was too small for the volume of trade carried on, and the sooner a permanent meat depot was erected in its place the better it would be for the trade. The board had already recommended to the Government that a new depot be erected at a site on railway land close to Glebe Island, close to the wheat stacks. No action had been taken by the Government, largely on account of the fact, no doubt, that the matter would have to be referred to a Public Works Committee.

The Commissioner said Mr. King made statements about the depot during the visit of inspection which he would no doubt repeat in evidence. The mutton shown to him at the depot was clammy, in spite of the fact that the night had been a cold one.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE CHEER-OH GIRLS.

There was a crowded audience at the Repertory Theatre on Tuesday night, when a smart revue by the Cheer-oh Girls, under the direction of Mrs. Bennett-White, was given for the purpose of raising funds for work for soldiers in connection with the Salvation Army Hall at the Liverpool Camp. Among the audience were many officers and men from the camp. Miss Pauline Walker and her lady friends, who supplied and sold sweets, did a brisk business. The artists who took part were Mrs. Bennett-White, Misses Beatrice Edmonds, Gwladys Fimister, Thora Wood, Joan Walford, Edith Dickenson, Vera Passmore, Gertrude Edwards, and Kitty Mardardy. Chaplain Ramage, in a brief speech, warmly thanked everyone associated with the production.

CHAPPELL PIANOS.

These excellent instruments are absolutely British throughout.

Over a century's experience is behind every Chappell sold. This in itself is a guarantee of thoroughness in construction.

The Chappell Piano is renowned for its purity of tone and delicacy of touch, two great features, only to be accounted for by selected material and the highly paid skilled artists who fashion these well-known instruments.

We have fortunately a full stock of Chappell Pianos in various designs and models, and should be pleased to show them to you and explain their merits.

If not convenient to call and see them, write for our Illustrated Catalogue and price list. They are free by post.

SALE OF SLIGHTLY-USED PIANOS. SALE

In order to make room for a tremendous shipment of Duo-Concerto Player Pianos, which have just arrived, we have decided to sell the whole of our stock of seldom-used Pianos at prices which make every instrument a perfectly sound investment, besides supplying you with a Piano that in many cases had so little use that it is practically equal to new.

These Pianos are from some of the best homes in Sydney, as they have been taken in exchange as part payment for Duo-Concerto Player Pianos, thereby giving the owners the environment and pleasure of a musical home, instead of keeping them as a piece of furniture to be used only by the few privileged ones who are able to play.

LIST OF INSTRUMENTS.

Broadwood, Haendel, Isserman, Lipp, Paling, Broadwood, Ronisch, Victor, Schwechten, Ronisch, Steinberg, Siewert, Victor, Sames, Schiedmayer, Wehage, Victor Wilmer, Radle, Simon Lipp, Ronisch, Hapsburg.

As an assurance for you to secure a genuine bargain, we are prepared to allow you the full amount paid at any time within twelve months in the event of you wishing to exchange the instrument for a new Piano or Player Piano, providing it has had fair wear and tear.

We advise you to make an early selection, as the prices we are asking for these Pianos will ensure a rapid sale.

Every instrument is guaranteed.
